Mr. Ellis suggests that the use of this present may be ascertained from a remark by old Lupton, that the flavour of wine is improved, and the wine itself preserved from mouldiness, by an orange or lemon stuck with cloves being hung within the vessel so as not to touch the liquor. 6.—The following lines are illustrative of Twelfth-night practices in the olden time:— Now Twelfth-day is coming, good housewife, I trowe, Get readie your churne, and your milk from the cowe, And fire your oven all ready to bake, For Emma comes here with a bonnie Twelfth-cake. It is possible that this popular belief dates as far back as the long and calamitous frost of 1205. Eten tells us that this frost lasted till near the end of March, "so that the ground could not be rilled." In 1820 the 14th of January was the coldest day of the year, and probably of the century; in more

My First and Last Bet.

NEVER made a bet but once, and it brought me bad luck. It was made on an election, and I won about £150. I was away from home at the time, and I invested the money in a handsome set of furniture for my wife. The furniture was packed and shipped, but an accident happened to the boat, and it was tied up six weeks in port. When delivered, it was so much damaged that after removing the handsome marble tops the furniture was sent to a cabinet shop for repairs. Shortly afterwards the shop took fire, and the furniture was burned.

On my return home, after hearing of the loss of my furniture, I found that one of the workmen had let something fall on one of the marble slabs and broken it. He thought that he would finish the business, so he got a sledge-hammer and smashed the whole lot of marble. His only son, a boy three years of age, stood by to see the fun, but stumbled and fell on a sharp piece of marble, receiving a dangerous wound on his temple. He has grown to manhood, but will carry to his grave an ugly scar.

It is foolish to fear what you cannot avoid.

than one locality the thermometer fell to four below zero. On a review of the hardest frosts chronicled in England, it is to be observed that they have generally occurred in January, only occasionally diverging a little into December on the one hand, and February on the other.

15.—The poetic gifts of Dr. Harrington were much thought of in his time, as may be gathered from the following verses addressed to him by a contemporary:—

When people borrow, it should be their care

To send things back again—it is but fair;

To gratitude and manners this is due.

Therefore, good doctor, to the God of Song

Return his lyre—you've really had it long;

Others must be obliged as well as you.

17.—Dr. Franklin exhibited a striking instance of the influence of reading, writing, and conversation, in prolonging a sound and active state of all the faculties of the mind. In his eighty-fourth year he discovered no one mark in any of them of the weakness of decay usually observed in the minds of persons at that advanced period of life.

31.—“Prince Charles,” says Dr. King, “was a miser. I have known him, with two thousand louis-d'or in his strong box, pretend he was in great distress, and borrow money from a lady in Paris who was not in affluent circumstances. His most faithful servants were ill-rewarded.”

Thunder in January signifieth the same year great winds, plentiful of corn and cattle, peradventure.—Book of Knowledge.

“This diary is only ruled out for January,” said a gentleman in a book shop.

“Yes,” replied the stationer, “our experience in the business has taught us that no one ever gets beyond the first month.”

The Garden.

Sow early mazagan and long-pod beans during the first and last weeks of the month; early peas in the beginning of the month; onions on very light soils; parsley, short-topped radish, and hardy green and brown Dutch lettuce. All kinds of fruit-trees should be pruned; wash those trees which are infested with insects with soap-suds and flower of sulphur and tobacco liquor. Prepare for making up hot-beds for early cucumbers and melons. Sow salads, carrots, and kidney-beans on slight hot-beds. Plant dried tubers and bulbs of bordered flowers if not done in autumn. Transplant herbaceous plants in light soils, if not done in autumn; also deciduous trees, shrubs, and hedges. Lay edgings when the weather is fine. Sow mignonette, stocks, &c., in pots. Sow sweet-peas and a few hardy annuals on a warm border. The protection of choice plants will now require particular care. Water plants in pots sparingly.

THE FINGER OF PROVIDENCE.

*In man's most dark extremity
Of succour dawns from Heaven.—SCOTT.*

King William III. of England, the Stadtholder of the Netherlands, was besieging Namur in 1693, sundry soldiers from his army, through the want which reigned in the camp, went marauding, though such a transgression of the martial law had been forbidden on pain of death. Most of these marauders were caught by the country people, and killed; only two of them reached the camp unscathed; but they were sentenced to death. They were both brave soldiers, and the general-in-chief wanted to save one of them, and thus commuted the judgment in so far, that they should have to throw at dice for their life, as was the custom in former times in such cases.

TRUE LOVE.

*True love's the gift which God has given
To man alone beneath the heaven:*

*It is not fantasy's hot fire,
Whose wishes, soon as granted, fly;*

*It liveth not in fierce desire,
With dead desire it doth not die;*

*It is the secret sympathy,
The silver link, the silken tie,
Which heart to heart, and mind to mind,
In body and in soul can bind.*

SCOTT.*

On the morning appointed for the execution, both the marauders were led to a drum, in order thereupon to cast the decisive throw; while, at a few paces further, the fatal pole already stood erect. Full of painful expectation, a group of officers, the regimental chaplain, and the executioner, surrounded the poor fellows. With a trembling hand, one of the condemned took up the dice; he threw—two sixes! In the next moment he saw that his fellow had also thrown—two sixes!

The commanding officers were not a little stricken at this strange occurrence: but their orders were precise, and so they commanded both the men to throw again. This was done; the dice were cast, and in the throw of both there turned up—two fives! The spectators now loudly called out that both should be pardoned; and the officers, to ask for new directions, momentarily put off the execution. They applied to the court-martial, which they found assembled; and, after a long discussion, the disheartening reply was that the delinquents should decide their lot with new dice. Once more both of them cast, and, lo—each threw two fours!

“This is the finger of God,” said all present.

The officers again submitted the strange case to the court-martial. This time, even the members of the court shuddered: and they resolved to leave the decision to the general-in-chief, who was momentarily expected.

The Prince of Vaudemont came. He caused the two Englishmen to appear before him: they related to him the trying circumstances of their desertion. The Prince listened attentively, and relieved the poor culprits with the welcome “Pardon,” adding, “it is impossible in such an uncommon case not to obey the voice of Divine Providence.”

STRAY NOTES.

Foul weather is no news; hail, rain, and snow are now expected, and esteemed no woe; Nay, 'tis an omen bad, the yomen say, If Phœbus shows his face the second day.
Country Almanac, Feb., 1676.

2.—Bishop Hall, in a sermon on Candlemas Day, remarks, that "it hath been an old (I say not how true) note, that hath been wont to be set on this day, that if it be clear and sunshiny, it portends a hard weather to come; if cloudy and lowering, a mild and gentle season ensuing." This agrees with one of Ray's proverbs:—

*The hind had as lief see his wife on the bier,
As that Candlemas Day should be pleasant and clear.*

So also Browne, in his "Vulgar Errors," affirms, that "there is a general tradition in most parts of Europe, that inferreth the coldness of succeeding winters from the shining of the sun on Candlemas Day, according to the proverbial distich:—
*'Si Sol splendescat Maria purificante,
Major erit glacies post festum quam fuit ante.'*"

12.—Lady Jane Grey suffered through the towering ambition of her parents, who contrived to have her proclaimed queen, and attempted thereby to set aside Mary's accession. The Lady Jane met her destiny on a scaffold on a green within the Tower, with fortitude and composure only equalled by the unsullied innocence of her life. Her execution was preceded by that of her ill-fated husband, on Tower-hill; and, as if to consummate her wretchedness, she saw his headless corpse being conveyed to the chapel, its final resting-place, as she was approaching the block. The deaths of these unfortunates was shortly succeeded by the executions of the Duke of Norfolk, Lady Jane's rash and imprudent father, and Lord Thomas Grey, her uncle.

14.—In some places, at this time, the lad's valentine is the first lass he sees in the morning who is not an inmate of the house; the lass's valentine is the first youth she sees. Gay mentions this usage on St. Valentine's Day; he makes

The Wonderful Parrot.

HERE was of late advertised a parrot who could make original observations—not mere slavish "copy," but the most apt remarks. A parrot-fancier answered this advertisement, and the advertiser brought his bird. He was not beautiful, and he did not look accomplished. He no sooner opened his mouth, however, than his genius discovered itself.

"Supposing that this bird is all that you say of it," inquired the possible purchaser, "what do you want for it?"

"Fifty pounds," said the dealer.

"Make it guineas," exclaimed the parrot.

The enraptured bird-fancier bought him at once.

Weeks rolled on, and the bird never said another word. Not even that solitary sentence, "Make it guineas."

He sent for the dealer, and thus frankly addressed him—"Of course, I have been taken in. This bird is dumb—can't even say 'What's o'clock?' or 'Fifty Poul.'"

"He only professes to make original observations," put in the dealer.

"Nonsense; he does nothing but scratch himself. You have got your money; at least tell me how he contrived to say 'Make it guineas' at so appropriate a moment. I'll forgive you if you'll only tell me the truth."

"Very good, sir; then he didn't say it at all. I'm a ventriloquist. My parrots all make original observations, but only in my presence."

a rustic housewife remind her good man:—

*I early rose just at the break of day,
Before the sun had chased the stars

*Afield I went, amid the morning dew
To milk my kine (for so should housewives do),*

*Thee first I spied, and the first swain

In spite of Fortune shall our true-love be."

18.—It is mentioned in the "Shepherd's Almanack" of 1676, that "some say, thunder on Shrove Tuesday foretelleth wind, store of fruit, and plenty. Others affirm that so much as the sun shineth on that day, the like will shine every day in Lent."

19.—This is the first day of Lent, on which, in the Romish Church, the priests heard the confessions of those who had neglected to conform to the established rules of worship, or who had committed any particular sin. The priest, after confession, clothed them in sackcloth, laid ashes on their heads, then sprinkled them with holy water, and repeated the seven penitential psalms over them, as they lay prostrate on the earth. They then walked in procession barefooted, and were not admitted into the Church again till Maunday Thursday, when they received absolution.

The practice of strewing ashes on the heads of sinners was derived by the Christians from the Jews; and the example of Job's friends is a proof that this was peculiar to the children of Israel. Tertullian's Treatise of Penance, and St. Cyprian's Book of those who Fell clearly show sackcloth and ashes were in the most early times of Christianity made use of as marks of penance, according to the established canons of the Church.

"Dusy yourself," says Horace, "not in looking forward to the events of to-morrow, but whatever may be those of the days Providence may yet assign you, neglect not to turn them to advantage."

The Garden.

Sow beans and peas in the beginning and end of the month; a few early cabbages, red cabbages, and savoy in the last week. Sow also early horn carrot, Dutch turnip, onions for a full crop in light soils, with a few leeks. Sow chervil and fennel and lettuce, with radishes and round-leaved spinach, twice in the course of the month; small salads every fortnight. Plant Jerusalem artichokes, garlic, horse-radish, and early potatoes. Strawberries may be planted about the end of the month. Transplant for seed, cabbage, cauliflower, turnip, &c. Transplant to the bottom of a south wall a few of the peas sown in November for the first crop. Prune apricots, peaches, nectarines, and plums, before the buds be much swelled; also apples, pears, cherries, gooseberries, currants, and raspberries, before the end of the month. Continue the forcing of all kinds of fruit. In the flower garden, in good weather, plant dried roots.

CURING A DEAD MAN.

There is a pleasure sure in being mad.—DRYDEN.

HERE lived at Taunton a person of some property who had several times filled the office of mayor with credit. He was, unfortunately for himself, a remarkably nervous and hypochondriacal subject. He would keep the house for weeks under the dread of danger in going abroad. Sometimes he fancied he was a cat or a dog, and conducted himself much in the style of one of these animals. But the most singular notion that came into his head was to fancy himself dead and refuse to be moved till his coffin came.

Never having carried his "thick coming fancies" so far before, his wife, seriously alarmed, sent for the doctor, who, when he came, said, "Well, Mr. Jones, how do you do this morning?" "Do," replied he in a low tone, "a pretty question to ask a dead man."

IN MINIATURE.

*Though Ned is short, he doubtless stands
A masterpicce from Nature's hands!
His words and actions, past dispute,
Exactly with his stature suit:
In mind and body, all agree,
A perfect miniature is he.*

ANON.

"Dead! what do you mean?"

"Yes, I died last Wednesday; the coffin will be here presently, the mourners are invited, and I shall be buried to-morrow."

The doctor, a man of sense and skill, immediately thought of a scheme that promised success; with a serious, steady countenance, he felt his pulse, and shaking his head, said, "I find it is indeed too true; you are certainly defunct, and the sooner you are buried the better."

The coffin arrived, he was carefully placed in it and carried towards the church. The surgeon, perfectly acquainted with his character, knew where he was vulnerable, and, acting accordingly, had given instructions to several neighbours how to proceed. The procession had scarcely moved a dozen yards, when a person stopped to inquire who they were carrying to the grave? "Mr. Jones, our late worthy overseer."

"What! is the old rogue gone at last? A good release, for a greater villain, to my certain knowledge, never lived."

The imaginary deceased no sooner heard this attack on his character, than he jumped up, and in a threatening posture said, "You lying scoundrel, if I was not dead, I'd make you suffer for what you say; but as it is, I am forced to submit." He then quietly lay down again, but ere they had proceeded half-way to the church, another party stopped the procession with the same inquiry, and added invective and abuse. This was more than our supposed corpse could bear: he was wrought up to a degree of frenzy, and jumping from the coffin, was in the act of following his defamers, when the whole party burst into an immoderate fit of laughter, and so far abashed this valetudinarian, that, ashamed of the public exposure, and awakened to a proper sense of his folly, he fought against the weakness, and in the end conquered it.

STRAY NOTES.

What boots it to repeat
How time is slipping underneath our feet?
Un-born, To-morrow, and
dead Yesterday.
Why fret about them if Today be sweet?

1.—Mr. Brady, in the "Clavis Calendaria," affirms that the custom of wearing the leek on St. David's Day is derived from St. David; who, according to him, caused the Britons under King Cadwallader to distinguish themselves from their enemies during a great battle, wherein they conquered the Saxons by virtue of his prayers and that regulation.

2.—Wm. Murray, Earl of Mansfield, died in 1793. He was born on the 2nd of March, 1705, and during thirty years, and until his death, presided as Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench. He was eminent as a lawyer, and dignified as a judge. It is said that he altered the common law of England by ingrafting upon it the civil law in his decisions. As an elegant scholar, of highly cultivated and vigorous intellect, he shone in the constellation of great men which arose in the reign of Queen Anne. In eloquence and beauty of diction, he out rivalled his pre-decessors, and has not been excelled by any successor in the high office he filled.

Lord Sandwich said of Mansfield, that "his talents were more for common use, and more at his fingers' ends, than those of any other person he had known."

17.—Brand, in his "Observations upon Popular Antiquities," states that "the shamrock is said to be worn by the Irish upon the anniversary of this saint, for the following reason:—When the saint preached the gospel to the pagan Irish, he illustrated the doctrine of the Trinity by showing them a trefoil, or three-leaved grass with one stalk, which operating to their conviction, the shamrock, which is a bundle of this grass, was ever afterwards worn upon this saint's anniversary, to commemorate the event.

21.—Lord Chesterfield is described by Lord Hervey as "very short, disproportioned, thick, and clumsily made; having a broad, rough-featured, ugly face, with black teeth, and a head big enough for a Polyphemus."

Pass it On.

THE following short epistle was written from Paris by Benjamin Franklin to an English gentleman, then there under pecuniary difficulties, who wished to return to his native country:—

"I send you herewith a bill for ten Louis d'ors. I do not pretend to give such a sum; I only lend it to you. When you shall return to your country, you cannot fail of getting into some business that will in time enable you to pay all your debts. In that case, when you meet with another honest man in similar distress, you must pay me by lending this sum to him, in-joining him to discharge the debt by a like operation, when he shall be able, and shall meet with such another opportunity; I hope it may thus go through many hands before it meets with a knave to stop its progress. This is a trick of mine for doing a deal of good with a little money. I am not rich enough to afford much in good works, and so am obliged to be cunning, and make the most of a little."

27.—The state in which the ill-fated Charles I. found the country on his accession, is pithily described by Howell, in his "Familiar Letters." "In the evening he was proclaimed at the Whitehall Gate, Cheapside, and other places, in a sad shower of rain; and the weather was suitable to the condition wherein he finds the kingdom, which is cloudy; for he is left engaged in a war with a potent Prince, the people by long desuetude unapt for arms, the fleet-royal in quarter repair, himself without a Queen, his sister without a country, the crown pitifully laden with debts, and the purse of the State lightly ballasted, though it never had better opportunity to be rich than it had these last twenty years."

30.—"The name Palm Sunday," says Forster, "comes from the custom of bearing palm boughs in procession, in imitation of those strewed before our Saviour. In northern latitudes, box, olive, and the blossoming willow, are used as substitutes for real palm, which tree does not here, as in Judea, grow by the waysides."

Barnaby Googe, in allusion to the ceremonies of this day, says:—
*Besides they candles up do light, of vertue like in all,
And willow branches hallow, that they Palmes do use to call.
This done, they verily beleeve the tempest nor the storme
Can neither hurt themselves, nor yet their cattell, nor their corne.*

Now the hedge-sparrow sings, as does also the sky-lark in the morning. And now may be heard the field-lark enlivening the stubble fields.

*The sun shines bright, the bees are out,
Humming the early flowers about:
Of crocus, yellow, striped, and blue,
Of hellebores of paler hue—
And noble liverworts, that blowing
In crimson, white, and blue, are glowing.*

The Garden.

Sow main crops of beans, peas, cabbage, onions, leeks, carrots, parsnips, Brussels sprouts, horecoles, lettuces, and spinach. Sow turnips and savoys in the beginning and end of the month. In the last fortnight sow asparagus, cauliflower, sea-kale, celery, &c. Small salads should now be sown every ten days. Plant early potatoes in the first week, and a main crop during the last fortnight. Jerusalem artichokes, sea-kale, asparagus, and peas, raised in frames, may now be planted. Propagate, by slips, the various pot-herbs, as mint, sage, savory, tansy, &c. Finish the pruning of fruit-trees before the middle of the month. Begin grafting in the third week. In the last week sow hardy annuals in the borders with biennials that flower the first season. Thin out and plant some of the autumn-sown annuals. This most important month for getting in main crops of several kinds is proverbial for boisterous weather, but take advantage of fine intervals.

THE WAYS OF A MISER.

Put money in thy purse.—SHAKSPEARE.

THE eccentric French miser Dubois combined a love of ostentatious display with intense covetousness. Mr. Cyrus Redding, in his very interesting account of misers, tells us that among Dubois's property, by inheritance, was much rich plate, and articles of furniture in excellent taste. His costly sideboard of silver was every day placed in order, as if some splendid entertainment were intended to be given; and he was flattered when any one, calling at his house, and being designedly led through his salle-à-manger about the usual dinner-hour, applauded the splendour there laid out. The silver dishes were borne on and off the table, while he was at dinner, as if the covers concealed the best meals, and being carried through a waiting-

VIRTUE.

*What one art thou, thus in torn weed y-clad?
Virtue, in price whom ancient sages had.
Why poorly rayed? For fading goods past care.
Why double faced? I mark each fortune's fare.
This bridle, what? Mind's riges to restrain.
Tools why bear you? I love to take great pain.
Why wings? I teach above the stars to fly.
Why tread you death? I only cannot die.*

NICHOLAS GRIMVALD.

room for strangers, on their way back to the pantry or kitchen, gave an idea of that kind of greatness of which their owner was desirous of producing the impression.

In the midst of all this empty show and secret meanness, Dubois dined on a few cheap vegetables and a bit of pork or mutton, brought on dishes and covers that mocked the eye of the stranger. For a dinner or supper all was laid out with the same array of plate. Silver dishes contained a single egg or a few olives, accompanied with a glass of poor weak wine. These composed his meal, the miserable fragments of which he would have saved or duly accounted for, and preserved towards the next day's potage.

Six noble silver candlesticks were brought into the saloon every evening, and the lights were displayed during the presence of a visitor, but extinguished at the moment of his departure. Then the great man repaired to his bed-room, which was lit with a miserable little taper that only served to throw a dingy light upon the surrounding gloom.

When going out, his servants, ill-fed ordinarily and plainly dressed, attended their master to the seat of justice, or to the court, in fine liveries. These were taken off on returning home, in order to preserve their splendid appearance and prevent them from being soiled.

Dubois, fearing his nearest relation would squander his wealth if he bequeathed it to him, preferred leaving it to a thrifty cousin, who won the niggard's heart by writing to him on a quarter of a sheet of paper. "I will make him my heir," said he, "for he knows how to prevent waste. What would be the use of a whole sheet of paper, when he can say all upon this slip? This is no disrespect to me; he is a good economist, and he shall be my heir."

STRAY NOTES.

Fortune, men say, doth give too much to many: But yet she never gave enough to any.

1.—On the 1st of April, 1810, Napoleon married Maria Louisa, Archduchess of Austria, on which occasion some of the waggish Parisians called him "un poison d'Avril," a term which answers to our April fool. On the occasion of his nuptials Napoleon struck a medal, with Love bearing a thunderbolt for its device.

3.—As Abernethy, the famous surgeon, was one day walking up Holborn, he overtook one of his pupils, and, as was his custom when he had once noticed intrinsic talent, he entered into familiar conversation with him, observing that he had missed him for some time from the dissecting-room. The young man, with tears in his eyes, told him he was involved in debt, and that his parents, overtaken, like himself, by the shafts of adversity, could not grant him the necessary supplies. "To what amount are you in debt?" "About £80, sir," answered the poor bankrupt. "Well," said Mr. A., "call at Bedford Row to-morrow morning at ten o'clock, and I will see what can be done for you." The young man was obedient to the wishes of his kind instructor, when a letter sealed up was put into his hand, on opening which he discovered a cheque for £90!

4.—Good Friday, as everyone knows, is "hot-cross bun day":—

*Hot-cross buns! hot-cross buns!
Give them to your daughters,
Give them to your sons;
And if you have none of those pretty elves,
You cannot do better than eat them yourselves.*

In old times, Good Friday was distinguished in London by a sermon preached at Paul's Cross (a wooden pulpit placed on stone steps, and surmounted by a cross, which stood till the time of the civil war, in the open air, near the north-east corner of St. Paul's Cathedral). The sermon was generally on the subject of Christ's passion.

11.—Mr. Canning's fund of animal spirits, and the extreme excitability of his temperament (it is stated in the Quarterly Review), were such as invariably to hurry him volentem, volentem, into the full rush and Killing the King.

BEAUMONT and Fletcher having concerted the rough draft of a tragedy over a bottle of wine in a tavern, Fletcher said he would undertake to kill the king. These words being overheard by a waiter, he lodged an information of treason against them. But on their explanation, that the expression meant only the murder of a stage monarch, and their loyalty being unquestioned, the affair ended in a jest.

A similar tale is told of a French dramatist, Nicolas de Pechantré. The composition of his tragedy, La Mort du Néron, occupied him during nine years. He one day left in a small inn, where he had been drinking, a piece of paper, on which several cyphers were scrawled, and the words, "Here let the king be slain!" It is found by the innkeeper; he carries it to the commissary, who desires to be informed when the person who dropped it again appears. Pechantré re-visits the auberge; the landlord hires to the commissary, and the poor playwright is taken prisoner. He produces the paper which he supposed to contain the plot of the conspiracy.

"Ah, Monsieur," cries Pechantré, "I am delighted to recover that paper; it is the scene where I kill Nero in a tragedy which I am composing."

Hasty counsels are quickly followed by repentance.

flush of conviviality. At the latter period of his life, when his health began to break, he would sit down with an evident determination to be abstinent, partake sparingly of the simplest soup, take no sauce with his fish, and mix water in his wine; but as the repaſte began to sparkle, and the anecdote to circulate, his assumed caution was inſenſibly relaxed, he gradually gave way to temptation, and commonly ended by eating of every thing, and taking wine with everybody—the very beau-ideal of an amphitryon.

12.—On the 12th of April, 1706, the death took place in London of John Seddon, an eminent writing-maſter, who, in fancy, invention, and the ornamental parts of penmanship, greatly excelled all his contemporaries, more eſpecially in the variety of his flouriſhed figures, for which he had a peculiar genius, hence the following lines were made for his epitaph:—

*Princes by birth, and politics, bear ſway,
But here lies one of more command
than they;
For they by ſteady councils rule a
land,
But this is he, could men, birds, beaſts,
command,
E'en by the gentle motion of his hand.
Then penmen weep, your mighty loſs
deplore,
Since the great Seddon can command
no more.*

17.—When Dr. Franklin applied to the King of Prussia for his assistance to America: "Pray, Doctor," said the monarch, "what is the object at which you aim?"

"Liberty, ſire," answered the philoſopher: "Liberty, the birthright of man."

"I was born a prince," ſaid his Maſteſty, "and am become a king: and I ſhall never conſpire to ruin my own trade."

The Garden.

Sow aſparagus, ſea-kale, beet, carrots, and onions, on heavy ſoils; alſo peas, beans, turnips, ſpinach, celery, cabbages, ſavoys, and German greens, for ſucceſſion. Sow broccoli and kidney-beans both in the ſecond and in the laſt week. Plant cauliflower, cabbages, ſea-kale, lettuces, and finiſh the planting of the main crop of potatoes. Attend to the hoeing and thinning of ſpinach, onions, turnips, &c. Earth up cabbages, cauliflower, peas, beans, and early potatoes; ſtake peas. Blanch ſea-kale and rhuſbarb in the open air by covering with ſtraw or leaves. Sow main or ſucceſſion crops of annuals of all ſorts: half-hardy annuals in warm borders or in ſlight hot-beds. Biennials and perennials ſhould be ſown before the middle of the month. Plant Tigridia pavonia and fine ſtocks. Finiſh the re-planting of herbaceous plants by the end of the firſt week. Plant out tender deciduous trees and ſhrubs raiſed in pots. Remove part of the coverings of all tender plants in the firſt week, and the remainder at the end of the month.

A ROMANCE OF THE NORTH.

In thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice.—SHAKSPEARE.

THESE are few Arctic navigators better known than Willem Barents, and not many narratives of adventure in the frozen regions more familiar to ſeamen of every country than the annals of the expedition of the Dutch mariner to Novai Zemlai in 1596-1597. Every one has read the tale how he ſailed from Texel, how he got frozen into the Ice Haven in Novai Zemlai in the autumn of 1596, and was compelled "in great cold, poverty, miſery, and griefe to ſtay all the winter."

Their adventures formed a ſtock romance of the North, and, ſtrange to ſay, in 1871 were deſtined to again come before the world with a pendant to their tale. In that year Captain Elling Carlsen, the ſkipper of a Norſe

THE FALL OF A PIGMY.

*Beſtride an ant, a pigmy great and tall.
Was thrown, alas! and got a dreadful fall;
Under th' unruly beaſt's proud feet he lies,
All torn; but yet with generous ardour cries,
"Behold, base envious world, now, now laugh on,
For thus I fall, and thus fell Phaeton."*

BISHOP SPRAT.

walrus sloop, was cruising about Novai Zemlai, and, the ſeaſon being an open one, unexpectedly found himſelf in the Ice Haven. Drawing in ſhore, he diſcovered an old houſe ſtanding at the head of the bay. It was ſtrongly built of materials that had evidently belonged to a ſhip, and around it were ſtanding ſeveral large puncheons, and heaps of reindeer, ſeal, bear, and walrus bones. Inside were bed-places, ſeamen's cheſts, a clock on the wall, halberds and muſkets, and a hoſt of other articles of ancient conſtruction, and unknown uſe to the navigator.

Though Carlsen ſuſpected that this was a very old encampment, yet it was not until his return to Norway that it was ſeen that he had found the identical houſe in which, nearly three centuries ago, Barents and his companions had wintered. The Arctic cold had preſerved its timbers and contents from decay, and it was evident that from the day Barents had deſerted it in 1597 no human being had ever viſited the ſpot.

On comparing the drawing in the interior of the houſe in De Veer's narrative, it was ſeen that every thing had remained exactly as it was during the winter of 1596-97. The clock was on the wall, the halberds were where the ſeamen had placed them, the aſhes of the fire were ſtill in the middle of the floor; the "bunks" were as they had been laſt ſlept in, a flute ſtill gave out a few notes, and doubtleſs was the ſame inſtrument on which the kindly captain played to his men; a few books of the period lay in the cheſts, and among other intereſting relics a quaintly curious copper dial, to work on an aſtolabe. But perhaps the moſt affecting of all theſe ſtrangely preſerved relics were the little ſhoes of the ſhip's boy, who died during the winter.

The collection was purchaſed by Mr. Liſter Kay, an Engliſhman, and by him made over to its rightful cuſtodians—the Dutch Government.

STRAY NOTES.

Now the bright morning star, Day's harbinger, Comes, dawning from the east, and leads with her The flowery May, who from her green lap throws The yellow cowslip and the pale primrose. Hail, bounteous May! that dost inspire Mirth, and youth, and warm desire; Woods and groves are of thy dressing, Hill and dale both boast thy blessing! Thus we salute thee with our early song, And welcome thee, and wish thee long. MILTON.

1.—Time out of mind May Day has been in this country a festive holiday, and its customs have reached other countries; for in France we find, as early as the middle of the fifteenth century, the following ceremony was performed: "In 1449, some notable personages, master goldsmiths of Paris, agreed, as an act of devotion, to present annually on the first of May, at midnight, a May before the principal door of the church of Notre Dame. They elected a prince for one year only, who was to settle the expenses of the said May. "The May was placed on a pillar in the form of a tabernacle, in the several faces of which were small niches occupied by different figures of silk, gold, and silver, representing certain histories, and below them were explanatory inscriptions in French verse. The May remained at the great door from midnight till after vespers the next day, when it was transported, together with the pillar, before the image of the Virgin, near the choir, and the old May of the preceding year was removed into the chapel of St. Anne, to be kept there also a year. This ceremony was regularly observed till 1607, when the goldsmiths presented to the church a triangular tabernacle of wood, very curiously wrought, in which three paintings were enclosed; these paintings were changed annually, and the old ones hung up in the chapel of Saint Anne."

14.—The personal appearance and delivery of Mr. Grattan are brought vividly before us in one of the lively sketches of Charles Phillips. "He was short in stature, and unprepossessing in appearance. His arms were disproportionately long. His walk was

A Statesman's Wife.

IN his thirty-fifth year Disraeli married the widow of his colleague, Wyndham Lewis, member for Maidstone. Mrs. Lewis was more than ten years his senior and had a large fortune. This apparently singular union was well known to be an unusually happy one. They appear to have adored each other. Mrs. Disraeli's devotion and strength of mind have been illustrated by a well-known anecdote. One day, when setting off to drive to the House of Commons, two of her fingers were crushed by the door of the carriage, but in spite of intense pain, she concealed it from her husband as he sat by her side, in order that he might not be disturbed in an important speech which he had to make. She kept up, so it is said, till the moment when he alighted, and then fell fainting on the cushions. When, in the year 1868, Disraeli declined a peerage for himself, he prayed the Queen to make his wife Viscountess Beaconsfield, and she bore the title until her death, in 1872.

There is nothing better than silence.

a stride. With a person swinging like a pendulum, and an abstracted air, he seemed always in thought, and each thought provoked an attendant gesticulation. How strange it is, that a mind so replete with grace, and symmetry, and power, and splendour, should have been allotted such a dwelling for its residence! Yet so it was; and so, also, was it one of his highest attributes that his genius, by its 'excessive light,' blinded his hearers to his physical imperfections. It was the victory of mind over matter." "The chief difficulty in this great speaker's way was the first five minutes. During his exordium laughter was imminent. He bent his body almost to the ground, swung his arms over his head, up, and down, and around him, and added to the grotesqueness of his manner a hesitating tone and drawing emphasis. Still, there was an earnestness about him that at first besought, and, as he warmed, enforced, nay, commanded attention."

29.—This day is known as Restoration Day, from being the anniversary of the day whereon King Charles II. made his magnificent entry into London.

Rule of Health for May: The month of May is called a "trying" month, to persons long ailing with critical complaints. It is common to say, "Ah, he'll never get up May-hill!" or, "If he can climb over May-hill he'll do." "As a rule of health for May," says Dr. Forster, "we may advise early rising in particular, as being essentially conducive to that blessing. Everything now invites the sluggard to leave his bed and go abroad."

*The season now hath cast away
Its garb of cold and wind and rain,
And dons its bright and fair array
Of smiling sunshine once again.
Once more do beast and bird assay
To wake the forgotten strain,
Because the season casts away
Its garb of cold and wind and rain.*

CHARLES D'ORLEANS, B. 1391.

The Garden.

Sow small salads every week; radishes and lettuces thrice, spinach once a fortnight; carrots and onions for late drawing; kidney-beans in the first week and last fortnight; peas and beans, cauliflowers, cabbages, Brussels sprouts, &c., for late crops. Continue the various operations of hoeing and earthing-up the different crops. Pick caterpillars from gooseberry bushes and wall-trees on their first appearance. Remove from raspberries and strawberries all suckers and runners that are not wanted. Sow annuals for succession. Propagate, by cutting, dahlias, pansies, double wall-flowers, rockets, scarlet lychnis, and lobelias, by dividing the roots. Plant out, during the last week, dahlias, hardy pelargoniums, and stocks, protecting the dahlias from slight frosts. In dry weather water becomes necessary to many plants in the open ground, but it should not be used unless positively required.

A STRANGE STORY.

'Tis strange but true; for truth is always strange.—BYRON.

HERE were some extraordinary incidents connected with the death of the second Lord Lyttleton. His lordship, on Thursday, November 5th, 1779, had spoken in the Upper House. In the evening he set out for his house at Epsom.

He sat up rather late after his arrival, and on retiring to bed was suddenly awakened from brief slumber, a little before midnight, by what appeared to be a dove, which, after fluttering for an instant near the bed-curtains, glided towards a casement window in the apartment, where it seemed to flutter for an instant longer, and then vanished. At the same moment his eye fell upon a female figure in white, standing at the bed foot, in which he at once recognised, says Warner, "the spectre of the unfortunate lady that had haunted him so long." It solemnly warned him to prepare for death within three days.

IN HIGH STATION.

*When men of infancy to grandeur soar
They light a torch to show their shame the more.*

In the morning his lordship seemed greatly decomposed, and complained of a violent headache. "He had had an extraordinary dream," he said, "suited, did he possess even a particle of superstition, to make a deep impression on his mind," and in afterwards communicating the particulars of the vision, he remarked, rather, however, in joke than earnest, that the warning was somewhat of the shortest, and that really, after a course of life so disorderly as his, three days formed but a brief period for preparation.

On Saturday he began to recover his spirits, and told a lady of his acquaintance at Epsom that as it was now the third and last day, he would, if he escaped but a few hours longer, fairly "jockey the ghost." He became greatly depressed, however, as the evening wore on; and one of his companions, as the critical hour of midnight approached, set forward the house clock, in the hope of dissipating his fears, by misleading him into the belief that he had entered on the fourth day, and was of course safe. The hour of twelve accordingly struck; the company, who had sat with him till now, broke up immediately after, laughing at the prediction; and his lordship retired to his bedroom, apparently much relieved.

His valet, who had mixed up at his desire a dose of rhubarb, followed him a few minutes after, and he sat up in bed, in apparent health, to take the medicine; but being in want of a tea-spoon, he despatched the servant, with an expression of impatience, to bring him one. The man was scarce a minute absent. When he returned, however, his master was a corpse. He had fallen backwards on the pillow, and his outstretched hand still grasped his watch, which exactly indicated the fatal hour of twelve. It has been conjectured that his dissolution may have been an effect of the shock he had received on ascertaining that the dreadful hour had not yet gone by: at all events, explain the fact as we may, ere the fourth day had arrived, Lyttleton was dead.

STRAY NOTES.

Life is most enjoyed When courted least; most worth when disesteemed.
YOUNG.

1.—“The general character of June,” says Howitt, “in the happiest seasons, is fine, clear, and glowing, without reaching the intense heats of July. Its commencement is the only period of the year in which we could possibly forget that we are in a world of perpetual change and decay. The earth is covered with flowers, and the air is saturated with their odours. It is true that many have vanished from our path, but they have slid away so quietly, and their places have been occupied by so many fragrant and beautiful successors, that we have scarcely been sensible of their departure. Everything is full of life, greenness, and vigour. Families of young birds are abroad, and give their parents a busy life of it, till they can pick for themselves. Rooks have deserted the rookery, and are feeding their voracious young in every pasture, and under every green tree. The swallow and swift are careering in the clear skies, and Ten thousand insects in the air abound. Flitting on glancing wings, that yield a summer sound.”

5.—In the Middle Ages animals formed as prominent a part in the worship of the time as they had done in the old religion of Egypt. The cat was a very important personage in religious festivals. At Aix, in Provence, on the festival of Corpus Christi, the finest Tom cat of the country, wrapt in swaddling clothes like a child, was exhibited in a magnificent shrine to public admiration. Every knee was bent, every hand strewed flowers or poured incense, and Grimalkin was treated in all respects as the god of the day. But on the festival of St. John, poor Tom's fate was reversed. A number of the tabby tribe were put into a wicker-basket and thrown alive into the midst of an immense fire, kindled in the public square by the bishop and his clergy. Hymns and anthems were sung, and processions were made by the priests and people in honour of the sacrifice.

6.—On the evening of this day, in 1780, during the

The Foolish Nurse.

A LADY overheard her nurse-girl talking to the little child she was putting to sleep, and saying—

“If you don't go right to sleep this minute, a big, awful black bear, with eyes like coals of fire, and sharp, white, cruel teeth, will come out from under the bed and e-a-t-y-o-u-a-l-l-u-p!”

The poor little thing huddled up under the clothes in terror.

That night, when the nurse had composed herself in her own bed, and put the light out, there came a sudden rap at the door—

“Maggie! Maggie!” cried her mistress, “for mercy's sake get up as quick as you can! There's a fearful burglar under your bed, and as soon as you get to sleep he's coming out to rob and murder you!”

At the word burglar the girl sprang screaming from the bed and rushed into the hall. When the girl's fears were calmed, her mistress said to her—

“You did not hesitate to tell my little delicate child, who could not possibly know that it was a lie, a cruel story of a bear under her bed; now, when I treat you to the same kind of story you are frightened to death.”

Gordon riots, the dwelling of Lord Mansfield, in Bloomsbury Square, was forcibly entered by the enraged mob, and all his furniture, extensive library, and other property of great value, were consigned to the flames, his lordship and family escaping with difficulty through a back door. A party of guards arrived during the act of demolition, and fired upon the mob, when several were killed and wounded.

14.—On the afternoon of the 14th of June, 1727, two horsemen might have been perceived galloping along the road from Chelsea to Richmond. The foremost, cased in jackboots of the period, was a broad-faced, jolly-looking, and very corpulent cavalier, but, by the manner in which he urged his horse, you might see that he was a bold as well as skilful rider. He speedily reached Richmond Lodge, and asked to see the owner of the mansion. The mistress of the house and her ladies said he could not be introduced to the master however pressing the business might be. The master was asleep after his dinner; he always slept after his dinner, and woe be to the person who disturbed him! Nevertheless, our stout friend of the jackboots put the affrighted ladies aside, opened the forbidden door of the bed-room, wherein upon the bed lay a little gentleman; and here the eager messenger knelt down in his jackboots. He on the bed started huddled up, and with many oaths and a strong German accent asked who was there, and who dared to disturb him? "I am Sir Robert Walpole," said the messenger. The awakened sleeper hated Sir Robert Walpole. "I have the honour to announce to your Majesty that your royal father, King George the First, died at Osnaburg on Saturday last, the 10th instant. "Das ist one big lie!" roared out his sacred Majesty King George the Second, but Sir Robert Walpole stated the fact.

The Garden.

Sow peas and beans for late crops. The kinds used for early crops are likewise best for this purpose. Sow salading every ten days; also carrots and onions for drawing young. In the beginning of the month sow eudive for an early crop. In the first week sow turnips for succession, and in the third week for a full autumn crop. Pull and store winter onions if ripe. Train and prune the summer shoots of all descriptions of wall and trellis trees. Net over cherry trees to protect the fruit from birds. Destroy insects by repeated washings and directing tobacco smoke against them, or by strewing snuff (or the fine powder of tobacco) upon them. Take up all bulbs and dry them in the shade before removing them. Remove all kinds of decaying crops. Sow perennials, if neglected last month, to be planted out in the spring. Watering out of doors is more or less necessary during this month for newly-planted vegetables and flowers, and from drought. After watering, loosen the ground round plants with the hoe.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

These are the times that try men's souls.—PAINE.

AMONGST the many exciting adventures which befel the late Laurence Oliphant, one of the most thrilling is the following, which he experienced during his visit to Ceylon. We give it in his own words:—

"On our way to Adam's Peak in Ceylon," he says, "we passed the night at a native house in one of the higher villages, and leaving our horses there, on the following morning pursued our way on foot amid scenery which at every step became more grand and rugged, the path in places skirting the edge of dizzy precipices, at the base of which foamed brawling

RETIREMENT.

*The statesman, lawyer, merchant, man of trade,
Pants for the refuge of some rural shade,
Where, all his long anxieties forgot
Amid the charms of a sequestered spot,
Or recollected only to gild o'er
And add a smile to what was sweet before,
He may possess the joys he thinks he sees,
Lay his old age upon the lap of ease,
Improve the remnant of his wasted span,
And, having lived a trifler, die a man.*

COWPER.

torrents. The way was often rendered dangerous by the roots of large trees, which, having become slippery by the morning mist, stretched across the narrow path, and one of these nearly cost me my life. The path at the spot was scarped on the precipitous hillside: at least three hundred feet below roared a torrent of boiling water—when my foot slipped on a root, and I pitched over the sheer cliff.

"I heard the cry of my companion as I disappeared, and had quite time to realise that all was over, when I was brought up suddenly by the spreading branches of a bush which was growing upon a projecting rock. There was no standing-ground anywhere, except the rock the bush grew upon. For some time I dared not move, fearing that something might give way, as the bush seemed scarcely able to bear my weight.

"Looking up, I saw my companion and the natives who were with us peering over the edge above, and, to their intense relief, shouted that so far I was all right, but dared not move for fear the bush would give way. They, however, strongly urged my scrambling on to the rock, and this, with a heart thumping so loudly that I seemed to hear its palpitations, and a dizzy brain, I succeeded in doing.

"The natives, of whom there were five or six, then undid their long waistcloths, and tying them to each other, and to a piece of cord, consisting of the united contributions of all the string of the parties and the packages they were carrying, made a rope just long enough to reach me. Fastening this under my arm-pits, and holding on to it with the energy of despair, or perhaps, I should rather say of hope, I was safely hauled to the top; but my nerve was so shaken that, although not in the least hurt, it was some moments before I could go on."

STRAY NOTES.

July, the month of summer's prime,
Again resumes his busy time,
Scythes tinkle in each grassy dell,
Where solitude was wont to dwell;
And meadows, they are mad with noise
Of laughing maids and shouting boys,
Making up the withering hay
With merry hearts as light as play.
CLARE.
Speaking of this month, C. Lamb says: "At last summer is come among us, and her whole world of wealth is spread out before us in prodigal array. The woods and groves have darkened and thickened into one impervious mass of sober uniform green, and having for a while ceased to exercise the more active functions of the spring, are resting from their labours in that state of 'wise passiveness,' which we, in virtue of our so infinitely greater wisdom, know so little how to enjoy."

1.—Admiral Duncan's address to the officers of his fleet, when they came on board his ship for his final instructions, previous to the memorable engagement with Admiral de Winter, was couched in the following laconic and humorous manner: "Gentlemen of my fleet, you see a very severe Winter fast approaching, and I have only to advise you to keep a good fire."

9.—Burke's colleague for Bristol was not remarkable as an orator. It is reported that after Burke had delivered one of his best speeches at Bristol, Cruger rose up and exclaimed, "I say ditto to Mr. Burke—I say ditto to Mr. Burke."

Burke, however, was not always appreciated. On one occasion he had just risen in the House of Commons, with some papers in his hand, on the subject of which he intended to make a motion, when a rough-hewn member, who had no ear for the charms of eloquence, rudely started up, and said, "Mr. Speaker, I hope the honourable gentleman does not mean to read that large bundle of papers, and to bore us with a long speech into the bargain." Burke was so swollen with rage, as to be incapable of utterance, and absolutely ran out of the House. On this occasion, George Selwyn remarked, that it was the only time

The Portrait of an Ancestor.

THE famous Quarterly reviewer, Mr. Abraham Hayward, once thought that he should like to have some ancestors. So he walked to Wardour Street, where one can generally pick up an ancestor or two of the Cromwellian, Queen Anne, or early Georgian period. Selecting a portrait of a cavalier in half-armor, with features not quite unlike his own, Mr. Hayward made a bid for it; but, deeming the price asked too high, he went his way. A fortnight after, the ancestral fever coming strongly upon him, he went again to Wardour Street, prepared to pay the dealer his price. The picture was sold.

A few days later Mr. Hayward went to dine with Lord Houghton, and was astonished to find the picture in the dining-room. Seeing that it attracted his guest's attention, Lord Houghton said—

"Very good picture that! Come into my hands in a curious way. Portrait of a Milnes of the Commonwealth period—an ancestor of mine."
"Indeed!" said Mr. Hayward. "He was near being an ancestor of mine."

he ever saw the fable realised—a lion put to flight by the braying of an ass.

12.—The person of Erasmus is thus described by Beatus Rhenanus: "In person not tall, but not noticeably short; in figure well built and graceful; of an extremely delicate constitution: sensitive to the slightest changes of climate, food, or drink. . . . His complexion was fair, light blue eyes, and yellowish hair. Though his voice was weak, his enunciation was distinct; the expression of his face cheerful; his manner and conversation polished, affable, even charming."

15.—In Poor Robin's Almanack for 1697 are the following lines, allusive to this day:

*In this month is St. Swithin's Day;
On which, if that it rain, they say,
Full forty days after it will
Or more or less, some rain distill.
This Swithin was a saint, I trow,
And Winchester's bishop also,
Who in his time did many a feat,
As Popish legends do repeat,
A woman having broke her eggs,
By stumbling at another's legs,
For which she made a woeful cry,
St. Swithin chanced for to come by,
Who made them all as sound, or more,
Than ever that they were before,
Better it is to rise by time,
And to make hay when the sun do
shine,
Than to believe in tales and lies,
Which idle monks and friars devise.*

25.—In 1603 the British Government bestowed a pension of two hundred pounds a year upon Charles Dibdin, "whose lyric muse had so much contributed to arouse the valour of our seamen and soldiers in the day of battle, to warm their hearts in the hours of merriment, and to console their nights in the gloom of a dungeon when prisoners in the hands of an implacable enemy."

The man who will live above his present circumstances is in great danger of living in a little time much beneath them.—ADDISON.

The Garden.

Sow peas in the first week for the last crop of the season. In the last week sow yellow turnips for a full winter crop, and spinach for an early winter supply. Plant full crops of celery, celeriac, and endive, about the middle and end of the month; late crops of broccoli, cauliflower, and coleworts in the last week. Gather and dry medicinal and pot-herbs; also propagate such by slips and cuttings. Continue the summer pruning and training of all wall-trees, with the destruction of insects. Plant strawberries in pots for forcing next winter. Take up the remainder of tuberous roots, such as anemone and ranunculus, and finish by the end of the first week. Propagate herbaceous and other plants, that have gone out of flower, by means of slips and cuttings. Advantage should be taken of rainy weather for planting, otherwise copious watering will be necessary. In dry weather, dip the roots in puddle before watering.

TRAVELLING IN THE OLDEN TIME.

The world is better now than then.—LEIGH HUNT.

A GENTLEMAN whose veracity may be depended on, slept, or rather should have slept, at the York Hotel, in the city of York, one morning in the month of May, 1822. He did not retire till midnight. Having taken his place by the Highflier Sheffield coach, which was to leave at half-past eight next morning, he gave orders to be called at half-past seven. He straightway composed himself; but at one o'clock, he was roused by a knocking at the door.

"Who's there?" said the sleepy traveller.

"Pray, sir, don't you go by the mail?"

"No, I go by the Highflier."

"Beg your pardon, sir, it's another gentleman."

THE COUNTRY INN.

*Of this establishment how can we speak?
Its cheese is mity, and its ale is weak.*

After many twistings and twinings he slumbered again, but scarcely had Morpheus taken him into his service ere a second voice said: "Two o'clock, sir, the Express will be off in half an hour."

"What have I to do with the Express? I wish you would express yourself elsewhere."

"Laws, sir, I was tow'd you went by the Express."

"I told your master I was to go by the Highflier, and I hope I shall hear no more of you till half-past seven."

"I ax your pardon, sir."

Again he tumbled and tossed, and again he became subject to the son of Erebus; but he was doomed to be haunted. At half-past three he heard a loud thundering at the door, "Sir, I've brong your boots, you mun be up in a moment, the coach is at the door."

Out bounced the astonished guest, and quickly rejoined, "Why did you not speak before? Why did your master say the coach went at half-past eight?"

"Bless me, sir, is it you as goes by the Highflier? They tow'd me as how you went by the Nelson. Beg your pardon, sir, am sure."

In any other place but York, this would have been the last customer, but the fates conspired. At five he heard another knocking, and his patience being exhausted, he exclaims, "What do you want?"

A faltering female replies, "Don't you go by the Highflier, sir?"

"To be sure I do."

"Well, sir, I'll be sure to call you at half-past seven."

Half-past seven arrived, and the gentleman made his appearance amidst a numerous assemblage of menials, all laden with petitions and apologies. "Please to remember the porter, sir." "Please to remember the waiter, sir." "Remember boots, sir." "Remember me, sir, if you please; I'm the chamber-maid, I called you, sir." Omnes, "I beg pardon, sir, for disturbing you."

"Yes, I'll pardon and remember you too, when I am many miles hence."

"But don't you mean to gee us nothing, sir?"

"Yes, I do mean to give you nothing; and I'll remember you all as long as I live, you may rely upon it."

STRAY NOTES.

*Myrtilla, rising with the dawn,
Steals roses from the blushing
morn;
But when Myrtilla sleeps
till ten,
Aurora steals them back again.*

August is the eighth month of the year. It was called Sextilis by the Romans, from its being the sixth month in their calendar, until the Senate complimented the Emperor Augustus by naming it after him, and through them it is by us denominated August.

Our Saxon ancestors called it "Armonath" (more rightly "bar-monath"), intending thereby the then filling of their barns with corn. Arn is the Saxon word for harvest. Accordingly to some they also called it "Woodmonath," as they likewise called June.

The sign of the zodiac entered by the sun this month is Virgo, the Virgin.

1.—"Antiquaries," says Brand "are divided in their opinions concerning the origin of Lammas Day; some derive it from Lamb-Mass, because on that day the tenants who held lands under the cathedral church in York, which is dedicated to St. Peter ad Vincula, were bound by their tenure to bring a live lamb into the church at High Mass; others derive it from a supposed offering or tything of lambs at this time." Various other derivations have been imagined. Blount, the glossographer, says that Lammas is called Hlaf-Mass, that is Loaf-Mass, or Bread-Mass, which signifies a feast of thanksgiving for the first fruits of the corn. It was observed with bread of new wheat, and in some places tenants are bound to bring new wheat to their lord, on or before the 1st of August. New wheat is called Lammas - Wheat. Vallancey affirms that this day was dedicated in Ireland, to the sacrifice of the fruits of the soil; that Laith-mas the day of the obligation of grain, is pronounced La-ee-mas, a word readily corrupted to Lammas; that ith signifies all kinds of grain, particularly wheat, and that mas signifies fruit of all kinds, especially the acorn, whence the word mast. From these explications may easily be derived the reasonable meaning of the word Lammas.

19.—Henry V. of England was a monarch whose

The Matrimonial Advertiser.

AMONGST the frequenters of Vauxhall Gardens in the beginning of this century was the eccentric baronet, Sir John Dinely, one of the first to make use of the matrimonial advertisement. He used to be seen there parading up and down in a cloak with long flowing folds and a broad hat, which looked as if it had started out of a picture by Vandyke. In spite of all his advertising efforts to gain a rich wife, he died a bachelor.

Here is an extract from one of his advertisements, taken from the Ipswich Journal of August 21st, 1802. It will be observed that he speaks of his "fortune," but that is to be taken with a grain of salt. "To the angelic fair. . . Worthy notice. Sir John Dinely, of Windsor Castle, recommends himself and his ample fortune to any angelic beauty. . . Ladies at a certain period of life need not apply. Fortune favours the bold. Such ladies as this advertisement may induce to apply or send their agents (but no servants or matrons) may direct to me at the Castle, Windsor."

THE SHEPHERD'S CHILD.

One touch of nature makes the whole world kin.

SHAKESPEARE.

SHEPHERD who inhabited a valley in the Grampian Mountains, when one day looking after his flock, took with him one of his children, a little boy of three years old.

After going some distance, attended by his dog, the shepherd found that he needed to ascend a hill at some distance. As the ascent was too fatiguing for the child, he left him on a small plain at the bottom, with strict injunctions not to stir from it till his return.

Scarcely, however, had he gained the summit, when the horizon was darkened by one of those impenetrable mists which frequently descend so rapidly amidst these mountains as in the space of a few minutes almost to turn day to night. The anxious father instantly hastened back to find his child; but, owing to the unusual darkness, he missed his way. After a fruitless search of many hours, he discovered that he had reached the career was singularly brilliant. Almost every historian has dwelt with pleasure on the beauties of his person and character. His mind was firm and well-informed; his courage invincible; and his disposition generous and humane. An author, contemporary with Henry, says, "He was very strong, and so swift, that without either dogs or missive weapons, he could catch a doe, one of the fleetest animals."

24.—If the twenty-fourth of August be fair and clear, Then hope for a prosperous harvest that year.

St. Bartholemew brings the cold dew.
RAY'S PROVERBS.

This is about the time when the watery spell of a weeping St. Swithin has nearly ceased to draw down the tears of Cœlum, the forty days of lamentation ending yesterday. The first-quoted proverb, therefore, relates to the speedy clearing up and settling of the weather to-day. Another saying:—

All the tears that St. Swithin can cry, St. Barthemy's dusty mantle wipes dry.

26.—In his first expedition to Britain Cæsar was led partly by curiosity and partly by a desire to detach from the Celtic confederacy a land which was a sure asylum of political refugees. The islanders made a brave resistance, and Cæsar was compelled to retreat.

29.—Louis IX. was an odious king. To this monarch the fear of death was so dreadful, that every folly that fancy could invent, or superstition suggest, were tried in vain to ward off the terrors of his approaching dissolution. During the reign of this sanguinary tyrant upwards of 4,000 persons were put to death without form of law. Some were thrown down precipices, some tortured to death, and many starved or stifled in deep damp dungeons.

Dry August and warm does harvest no harm.

The Garden.

Sow winter and spring spinach in the beginning and about the end of the month; parsley and winter onions for a full crop in the first week; cabbages, cauliflowers, savoy, and German greens, about the middle of the month, for planting out in spring; lettuces in the first and last week; small salads occasionally. Plant and earth up celery and endive. A few coleworts may still be planted. Net up, in dry weather, gooseberry and currant bushes, to preserve the fruit till late in the autumn. Every exertion should now be made to preserve the ripening fruit on the walls from insects, and to destroy wasps' nests. Sow auricula and primula seeds in pots and boxes. During this month the hues of autumn will begin to make their appearance; but its approaches in the flower borders may be deferred for a considerable time by regularly removing decayed flowers of such plants as throw out a succession.

bottom of the valley, and was near his own cottage. To renew the search that night was fruitless.

Next morning, by break of day, the shepherd, accompanied by a band of his neighbours, set out in search of his child; but, after a day spent in fruitless fatigue, he was at last compelled by the approach of night to descend from the mountain. On returning to his cottage, he found that the dog he had lost the day before had been home, and, on receiving a piece of cake, had instantly gone off again. For several successive days, the shepherd renewed the search for his child, and still on returning home disappointed in the evening, he found that the dog had been home, and on receiving his allowance of cake, had disappeared.

Struck with this singular circumstance, he remained at home one day; and when the dog, as usual, departed with his piece of cake, he resolved to follow him, and find out the cause of this strange procedure. The dog led the way to a cataract at some distance from the spot where the shepherd had left his child. The banks of the cataract were almost joined at the top, yet separated by an abyss of immense depth. Down the rugged and almost perpendicular descent the dog began, without hesitation, to make his way, and at last disappeared by entering into a cave.

The shepherd, with difficulty, followed; but, on entering the cave, what were his emotions, when he beheld his infant eating with much satisfaction the cake which the dog had just brought him; while the faithful animal stood by, eyeing his young charge with the utmost complacency! From the situation in which the child was found, it appeared that he had wandered to the brink of the precipice, and then either fallen or scrambled down till he reached the cave. The dog by means of his scent had traced him to the spot, and afterwards prevented him from starving by giving up to him his own daily allowance. He appears never to have quitted the child by night or day, except when it was necessary to go for food.

STRAY NOTES.

AUTUMN.

Laden with richest products of the earth; Its choicest fruits, enchanting to the eye, Grateful to taste, and court- ing appetite.

This is the ninth month of the year; anciently it was the seventh, as its name imports, which is compounded of septem, seven, and imber, a shower of rain, from the rainy season usually commencing at this period of the year.

Our Saxon ancestors called this month "Gerstmonat," for that barley which that month commonly yielded was antiently called gerst, the name of barley being given unto it by reason of the drinke therewith made, called beere, and from beerlegh it come to be berlegh, and from berleg to barley. So in like manner beereheym, to wit, the overdecking or covering of beere, came to be called berham, and afterwards barne, having since gotten I wot not how many names besides. This excellent and healthsome liquor, beere, antiently also called ale, as of the Danes it yet is (beere and ale being in effect all one), was first of the Germans invented, and brought in use."

2.—There is a description of the Great Fire of London in a rare tract, published in the year 1667, entitled, "Vincents God's Terrible Voice in the City," which begins as follows:—

"It was the 2nd of September, 1666, that the anger of the Lord was kindled against London, and the fire began: it began in a baker's house, in Pudding Lane, by Fish Street Hill; and now the Lord is making London like a fiery oven in the time of his anger, and in his wrath doth devour and swallow up our habitations. It was in the depth and dead of the night, when most doors and fences were locked up in the city, that the fire did break forth, and appear abroad like a mighty giant refreshed with wine."

5.—Two Irish gentlemen walking in the Place Vendôme, stopped before a celebrated statue of Victory holding the crown of laurel over the head of Louis XIV. A French officer was enumerating the splendid deeds of that heroic king, and called particular attention to the attitude of Victory. "Pray, sir," said one of the Irishmen, "may I take the

A Flow of Speech.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER observed that if a lady officer wanted to give the word "Halt," she would do it in the following strain: "You soldiers, all of you, now mind what I say, I order you, as soon as I have done speaking, to stand still, every one of you, on the spot where you happen to be. Don't you hear me? Halt! I say, all of you."

Upon this a strong-minded woman, in an American paper, makes the following comment:—"Now, Monsieur Jean, it was an unlucky day on which you wrote that sentence. May you never hear anything but that little concise word 'No' from every rosy pair of lips you meet. May you halt witless through life. May your buttons be snappish, your strings knotty, and your stockings full of holes. May your bootjack be missing, your feet corny, and your shaving water cold; your razor dull, your hair stand up, your collar lie down. May your coffee be muddy, your toast smoky, and your tea (?) water bewitched; and, with a never-dying desire for affection, may you crawl through creation a meek, miserable, nasty, forlorn, fidgety, fussy, ridiculous, ruined, dejected old bachelor."

liberty of asking a question? Is Victory putting the laurel on his majesty's head, or taking it off?"

8.—On the 8th of September, 1741, a terrible storm did considerable damage on the river Thames, and many trees were torn up by the roots; at Newcastle great damage was done to the shipping; at Canterbury, by the fall of chimneys, and the unroofing of houses, several parts of the city looked as if they had been bombarded; at Huntingdon, several windmills were overthrown, and in one the miller was killed; but St. Ives presented a scene of complete desolation, many houses being stripped, some thrown down, and the fine spire of the steeple totally demolished; a little boy, who had run into the church porch, and stayed till it was full of stones, endeavoured to get out at a window in the side, and was carried away by the wind, and thus his life was miraculously preserved; at Biggleswade the storm did not last twenty minutes.

23.—About this period of the year the walnut, which dates its origin from the warm vales of Persia, is in general plentiful. Anciently, many curious ceremonies were practised with nuts and walnuts, and the latter were commonly strewed at the Roman weddings, especially in all the avenues leading to the nuptial apartment, and before the feet of the bride on her way to the altar. This ceremony, says Dr. Hunter, was to show that the bridegroom had left off all boyish amusements. To this nuptial sport allusions are frequently made by the poets; we find it mentioned by Catullus, who speaks of it thus:—

*Let the air with Hymen ring!
Hymen, lo Hymen, sing!
Soon the nuts will now be flung;
Soon the wanton verses sung;
Soon the bridegroom will be told
Of the tricks he played of old.*

The Garden.

Sow a few small salads for late crops; lettuce and spinach, if not done last month, for spring crops. Plant endive and lettuce. If broccoli be too strong or tall to withstand the winter, lift them and lay them nearly up to the neck in the earth. Lift onions, and lay them out on a dry border or gravel walk. Lift potatoes and store them. Finish the autumn pruning and training of fruit-trees. Gather and store carefully the autumnal stores of apples and pears. Plant strawberries for a main crop. Sow in the beginning of the month all half-hardy annuals, if not done last month; also the different species of primula, and the seeds of all such plants as, if sown in spring, come up the same season, but, if sown in September or October, vegetate readily the succeeding spring. Continue the propagation of herbaceous plants, and plant evergreens. If a bed is prepared expressly to sow pinks as show flowers, it should be done now. The soil should be good loam, about a foot and a half deep. Keep walks and borders as neat as possible.

THE JEWELS.

The poetry of earth is never dead.—KEATS.

THE celebrated teacher, Rabbi Meir, sat during the whole of one Sabbath day in the public school, instructing the people. During his absence from the house his two sons died, both of them of uncommon beauty, and enlightened in the law. His wife bore them to her bed-chamber, laid them upon the marriage bed, and spread a white covering over their bodies. In the evening the Rabbi Meir came home.

"Where are my two sons," he asked, "that I may give them my blessing? I repeatedly looked round the school, and I did not see them there."

She reached him a goblet. He praised the Lord at the going out of the Sabbath, drank, and again asked—

OUTSIDE SHOW.

*'Tis the mind that makes the body rich;
And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,
So honour peareth in the meanest habit.
What, is the jay more precious than the lark
Because his feathers are more beautiful?
Or is the adder better than the eel
Because his painted skin contents the eye?*

SHAKESPEARE.

"Where are my sons, that they, too, may drink of the cup of blessing?"

"They will not be far off," she said, and placed food before him that he might eat.

He was in a gladsome and genial mood; and when he had said grace after the meal, she thus addressed him:—

"Rabbi, with thy permission, I would fain propose to thee one question."

"Ask it, then, my love," he replied.

"A few days ago, a person entrusted some jewels to my custody, and now he demands them again: should I give them back again?"

"This is a question," said Rabbi Meir, "which my wife should not have thought it necessary to ask. What! wouldst thou hesitate or be reluctant to restore to every one his own?"

"No," she replied, "but yet I thought it best not to restore them without acquainting you therewith."

She then led him to the chamber, and stepping to the bed, took the white covering from the dead bodies.

"Ah! my sons, my sons!" thus loudly lamented the father; "my sons! the light of my eyes and the light of my understanding!—I was your father, but ye were my teachers in the law."

The mother turned away and wept bitterly. At length she took her husband by the hand and said—

"Rabbi, didst thou not teach me that we must not be reluctant to restore that which was entrusted to our keeping? See, the Lord gave, the Lord has taken away, and blessed be the name of the Lord?"

"Blessed be the name of the Lord!" echoed Rabbi Meir; "and blessed be His name for thy sake too, for well it is written, 'Whoso hath found a virtuous wife, hath a greater treasure than costly pearls: she openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness.'"—Traditions of the Rabbins.

STRAY NOTES.

The velocity with which time flies is infinite, as is most apparent to those who look back.—SENECA.

October is a month as various as April—clear skies and fogs, drought and rain, sunshine and storm, greenness and nakedness—it has them all, and often in a rapid succession. In the early part of the month the hardy yarrow and a few other flowers remain, and the meadow-saffron and the autumnal crocus spring up, and give a last gleam of floral beauty to the year. The grass, if the weather be mild, is vividly green and luxuriant as in Spring. Fine clear days occasionally come out, affording in the perfect repose of the landscape, the blueness of the waters, and the strong shadows cast by the trees upon the sunny ground, the highest pictorial beauty; but they are speedily past, and rains and mist wrap the face of the earth in gloom. Yet the glooms and obscurity of autumnal fogs, however dreary to the common eye, are not unwelcome to the lover of Nature. They give an air of wildness to the most ordinary scenery; but to mountains, to forests, to solitary sea-coasts, they add a sombre sublimity that at once soothes and excites the imagination; and even when not pleasant themselves, they minister to our pleasures by turning the heart to our bright firesides—to the warmth and perpetual summer of home.

4.—In his first speech to his Parliament, Richard Cromwell thus beautifully touches upon his father's death:—"He died full of days spent in sore and great travail, yet his eyes were not waxed dim, neither was his natural strength abated; as it was said of Moses, he was serviceable even unto the last. As to these nations, he left them in great honour abroad, and in full peace at home: all England, Scotland, and Ireland dwelling safely, every man under his vine and his fig-tree, from Dan, even to Beersheba."

Richard Cromwell was an amiable man, but wholly destitute of force or energy of character. His last words were highly characteristic. When dying, he said to his daughters, "Live in love. I am going to the God of love."

The Street Cries of London.

THE street cries of London have their irritating as well as their amusing side. A correspondent writes:—

At 7.30 a.m. my street, near Bedford Square, is awakened from its slumbers by a brazen-throated woman, who would shake the walls of Jericho, with "Crash! waddie greases!" and she is but one of five, less powerful, but quite as lasting. Then follow men, most mournful, with coals, fish, vegetables; one broad-chested coster, with a mouth like the entrance to a quart pot and a roar like an angry lion, "Make her all, foresherlin! foresherlin! foresherlin!" a morose monomaniac, with two long-drawn, melancholy, maddening notes, "Yack—Yowe!" meaning milk; three men, with a small donkey-load of lettuce, "Five at pegs, all 'ot 'ere, yah." "Soo dak a daddy run broo-o!" and so on, without fifteen minutes' cessation at a time. When I complain of these things, I am told, "These people must live." So be it; but have I and countless others no share in that general heritage?

9.—St. Dionysius, whose name is abbreviated into Denys, was Bishop of Paris. He is said to have died A.D. 272. Tradition informs us that he was martyred on Mont St. Martyr; and an absurd distich has been founded on his legendary end; it runs thus:—

*St. Denis had his head cut off—he did not care for that,
He took it up, and carried it a mile without his hat.*

10.—On the 10th of October, 1791, the brave Polish general Thaddeus Kosciusko fell into the hands of the Russians, covered with wounds, whilst rallying his countrymen to repel the ferocious invaders of his country. It is but just to say that the barbarity exercised upon the Poles by the soldiers of the Empress of Russia was not extended to this gallant man; for, during his captivity, he was treated with great respect, and the Emperor Paul bestowed upon him an estate.

15.—Hume, in summing up the character of James II., says, "In domestic life, his conduct was irreproachable; severe, but open in his enmities; steady in his councils; diligent in his schemes; brave in his enterprises; faithful, sincere, and honourable in his dealings with all men." If his good qualities had not been swallowed up in bigotry and arbitrary principles, there is every reason to believe he would have made an excellent sovereign, his middling talents were aided by so many virtues.

17.—St. Etheldreda was a Saxon princess of distinguished piety, and was born about 630 in Suffolk. In the year 673 she founded the conventual Church of Ely with the adjoining convent. Of this monastery she was constituted abbess. It flourished for nearly two hundred years.

A wise man is never less alone than when he is alone.

SWIFT.

The Garden.

PLANT small salads and radishes in the first week; mazagan beans and early frame peas in the last week. If the winter prove mild they will be somewhat earlier than those sown next month or in January. Plant cabbages in beds or close rows till wanted in spring. Store potatoes, beet, carrots, parsnips, &c., by the end of the month. This is the best season for transplanting fruit-trees. Store and lay up very carefully during the month all sorts of apples and pears, the longest-keeping sorts not before the end of the month, if the weather be mild. A great part of them may be placed in a close cellar. Plant the greater part of the common bulbs about the end of the month, with a few anemones for early flowering. Put in cuttings of all sorts of evergreens. The garden kinds of roses may now be pruned and the suckers removed. Thrift and other edgings may still be planted. Destroy weeds and keep the walks and other parts of the garden neat and clean. Protect any choice flowers from heavy rains.

ARTISTIC ABSURDITIES.

Variety's the very spice of life.—COWPER.

IN looking over some collections of old pictures, it is surprising what extraordinary anachronisms, blunders, and absurdities, are often discoverable.

In the gallery of the convent of Jesuits at Lisbon, there is a picture representing Adam in Paradise, dressed in blue breeches with silver buckles, and Eve with a striped petticoat. In the distance appears a procession of Capuchin monks engaged in bearing the cross.

In a country church in Holland there is a painting representing the sacrifice of Isaac, in which the painter has depicted Abraham with a blunderbuss in his hand,

THE GENERAL LOVER.

*I never knew a sprightly fair
That was not dear to me;
And freely I my heart could share
With every one I see.*

*It is not this or that alone
On whom my choice would fall;
I do no more incline to one
Than I incline to all.*

*The circle's bounding line are they,
Its centre is my heart;
My ready love, the equal ray
That flows to every part.*

ready to shoot his son. A similar edifice in Spain has a picture of the same incident, in which the patriarch is armed with a pistol.

At Windsor there is a painting by Antonio Verrio, in which the artist has introduced the portraits of himself, Sir Godfrey Kneller, and May, the surveyor of the works of that period, all in long periwigs, as spectators of Christ healing the sick.

A painter of Toledo, having to represent the three wise men of the East coming to worship on the nativity of Christ, depicted three Arabian or Indian kings, two of them white and one black, and all of them in the posture of kneeling. The position of the legs of each figure not being very distinct, he inadvertently painted three black feet for the negro king, and three also between the two white kings; and he did not discover his error until the picture had passed out of his hands, and was hung up in the cathedral, and subjected to the criticism of his fellow citizens.

In another picture of the Adoration of the Magi, which was in the Houghton Hall collection, the painter, Brughel, had introduced a multitude of little figures, finished off with true Dutch exactitude, but one was accoutred in boots and spurs, and another of the wise men was handing in, as a present, a little model of a Dutch ship.

The same collection contained a painting of the stoning of Stephen the martyr, by Le Sœur, in which the saint was attired in the habit of a Roman Catholic priest at high mass.

A picture by Rubens, in the Luxembourg, represents the Virgin Mary seated in council, in company with two cardinals and the god Mercury, who were assisting in her deliberations.

STRAY NOTES.

*The dusky night rides down the sky,
And ushers in the morn,
The hounds all make a jovial cry,
And the huntsman winds his horn.*

The month of November was said by the ancients to be under the tutelary protection of Diana, and this might possibly be on account of the prevalence of hunting and field sports in general during this month. In the calm, dark, warm days which now often occur, when sounds are heard at a distance, this notion has often suggested itself to us when we have heard the cheerful and lively music of several packs of harriers and of beagles at one time, in full cry, in different directions, as used to be often heard in Sussex; and on hearing which we might well say with Shakespeare—

*Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,
And fetch thine echoes from the hollow earth.*

5.—Poor Robin's Almanack for 1677 contains the following lines on the ever-to-be-remembered 5th of November—

*Now boys with squibs and crackers play,
And bonfires blaze turns night to day.*

This day is still kept to commemorate the attempts of certain miscreants to blow up the Parliament House.

11.—The festival of St. Martin, first instituted about the year 650, was anciently a day of great feasting and revelry, as will appear by the following extract from an ancient ballad, entitled "Martilmasse Day":—

*Some do the Citie now frequent,
Where costlie shows and merriemente
Do weare the vapourish evening out,
With interlude and revelinge rout;
Such as did pleasure Englands Queene,
When here her Royal Grace was seen;
Yet will they not this day let passe,
The merrie day of Martilmasse.*

12.—Richard Baxter preached a sermon before Charles II., which is supposed to have occupied an hour and a half in the delivery; and, though the title-page states it to have been preached "contractedly," certain "enlarge-

The Enthusiastic Naturalist.

AN extraordinary instance of the power of enthusiasm to surmount the most disheartening obstacles is met with in the life of Audubon, the famous naturalist. Going on a journey he left a collection of two hundred of his original drawings—the work of many years—in the hands of a relative residing in Kentucky. On his return he called for the box which contained them. "The box," he says, "was produced and opened, but—reader, feel for me!—a pair of Norway rats had taken possession of the whole, and had reared a young family amongst the gnawed bits of paper which, but a few months before, represented nearly a thousand inhabitants of air! . . . I slept not for several nights, and the days and nights passed like days of oblivion, until, the animal power being recalled into action through the strength of my constitution, I took up my gun, my notebook, and my pencils, and went forth to the woods as gaily as if nothing had happened. I felt pleased that I might now make better drawings than before, and ere three years had elapsed I had my portfolio filled again."

It is difficult to change nature.

ments" are stated to have been made. He is said to have once preached three hours and a half.

21.—Purcell, the famous musician, died on the 21st of November, 1695, at the age of thirty-seven. His death is commonly ascribed to a cold, occasioned by being kept too long at his own door, one evening, when he came home. It is said that his wife, provoked at his habit of keeping late hours, had ordered the servants not to admit him after midnight. Unfortunately, he came home from a tavern heated with wine, beyond the prescribed hour, was kept for some time at the door in a cold night, and contracted the disease of which he died.

This story, so shocking to the memory of his widow, does not seem to be authenticated, and we are not inclined to believe it. If she could have treated her husband with such harshness as to cause his death, the expressions of grief and tenderness, in her dedication to Lady Elizabeth Howard, prefixed to the posthumous publication of his works, must have been a piece of hypocrisy revolting to everybody, at a time when, if there was any foundation for the story, it must have been well known. Besides, Purcell, in his will, made on his death-bed, and dated on the 1st of November, after reciting that he was in sound mind, though very ill in constitution, leaves all his effects to his loving wife Frances, and appoints her his sole executrix; a mark of his love and affection which he would hardly have shown had he felt himself dying in consequence of her unkind treatment. It may be added that his phrase, ill in constitution, corroborates the opinion that his death was occasioned by a consumption or decline, probably produced, or at least aggravated, by intemperance and irregular hours.

The Garden.

Sow early frame peas and mazagan beans in the second week, for an early crop. Protect endive, celery, artichoke, and sea-kale with stable litter or ferns; mulch asparagus with hot-bed manure; take up endive, late cauliflower, early broccoli and lettuces, and lay them in an open shed or in old cucumber or melon pits, which will protect them from frost and afford a supply during winter. Plant all sorts of fruit-trees in fine weather—the earlier in the month the better. Commence and carry on the various operations of pruning and nailing when the weather permits. Plant dried tubers of border flowers, but the finer sorts had better be deferred till spring. Protect such half-hardy plants as were not sheltered last month. Plant deciduous trees and shrubs as long as the weather continues favourable, and before the soil has parted with the solar heat absorbed during summer. This is the reason why early autumn planting is so strongly recommended. Tulips must be planted in the first week if the weather permits. They are usually planted in rows six inches apart, along a four-foot bed.

There is a tale in everything.—COLERIDGE.

A STRANGER came recommended to a merchant's house at Lubeck. He was hospitably received, but the house being full, he was lodged at night in an apartment handsomely furnished but not often used. There was nothing that struck him particularly in the room when left alone till he happened to cast his eye on a picture. It was a single head, but there was something so frightful, so unearthly, in its expression, that he found himself irresistibly attracted to look at it. His imagination was filled by it, and his rest broken.

In the morning his host saw that he had slept ill, and inquired the cause, which was told. The master of the house was much vexed, and said that the picture ought to have been removed, that it was an oversight, and that it always was removed when the chamber was used. The picture, he said, was indeed terrible to every one. The story of it was this:—

THE BALD PHILOSOPHER.

*My hair and I are quits, d'ye see?
I first cut him, he now cuts me.*

"My father," said he, "was at Hamburg on business, and, whilst dining at a coffee-house, he observed a young man enter, seat himself alone in a corner, and commence a solitary meal. His countenance bespoke the extreme of mental distress, and every now and then he turned his head quickly round as if he heard something, then shuddered and grew pale.

"My father saw this same man at the same place for two or three successive days, and at length became so much interested about him, that he spoke to him. He proved to be an Italian, well informed, poor but not destitute, and living economically upon the profits of his art as a painter. Their intimacy increased, and at length the Italian, seeing my father's involuntary emotion at his convulsive turnings and shudderings, told him his story.

"He was a native of Rome, and had lived in some familiarity with a young nobleman; but upon some slight occasion they had fallen out, and his patron had struck him. The painter brooded over the disgrace of the blow. He could not challenge the nobleman, on account of his rank; he therefore watched for an opportunity, and assassinated him. Of course he had fled from his country, and finally had reached Hamburg. He had not, however, passed many weeks from the night of the murder, before, one day in the crowded street, he heard his name called; he turned short round, and saw the face of his victim looking at him. From that moment he had no peace; at all hours, in all places, and amidst all companies, he heard the voice, and could never help looking round; and whenever he so looked round, he always encountered the same face staring close upon him. At last, in a mood of desperation, he had fixed himself face to face, and eye to eye, and deliberately drawn the phantom visage as it glared upon him; and this was the picture so drawn. He gave the finished picture to my father, in return for the kindness which he had shown."

STRAY NOTES.

Roast beef, wise mirth, bright
fires, are now three things
Which this cold season with contentment brings.

1.—When a statue was erected to the memory of Ebenezer Elliot by the working men of Sheffield,
a poetical tribute was written
by Walter Savage
Landon. Two lines in Landon's verses, designating Elliot as one

—whom strong genius took
from poverty,
And said, Rise, mother, and
behold thy child!

constitute, probably, the highest tribute the Corn-
Law rhymers has obtained,
or is likely to obtain.

11.—Llewellyn, Prince of Wales, whilst retreating
before the victorious army
of Edward I., was killed
by a warrior named Adam Franchton. The Welsh-
men, upon the death of
their leader, were dispersed, and the country reduced, after having preserved its liberty for 80
years against the efforts of the English monarchy.
The head of the ill-fated Llewellyn, with that of his brother David (who was taken in arms), were placed,
crowned with ivy, on the
Tower of London.

16.—A man is infinitely mistaken who thinks there is nothing worth seeing in winter-time out of doors,
because the sun is not warm, and the streets are muddy. "Let him get, by dint of good exercise, out of the streets, and he shall find enough. In the warm
neighbourhood of towns
he may still watch the field-fares, thrushes, and
blackbirds; the titmouse
seeking its food through the straw-thatch; the red-
wings, field-fares, skylarks,
and titlarks, upon the same
errand, over wet meadows;
the sparrows and yellow-
hammers, and chaffinches,
still beautiful though
muted, gleaning from the
straw and chaff in farm-
yards; and the ring-dove, always poetical, coming for
her meal to the ivy-berries.
About rapid streams he may see the various habits
and movements of herons,
woodcocks, wild ducks, and other water-fowl, who are obliged to quit the frozen marshes to seek their food
there. The redbreast comes to the windows, and often into the house itself, to be rewarded for its song, and
for its far-famed 'painful'
obsequies to the Children
in the Wood."

The Astrologer's Predictions.

THE Caliph Abu Jaaffar Almansor sent for a man who was celebrated as an astrologer, and ordered him to take his horoscope. After accurate calculations, the sage told the Caliph that all pretenders to his throne would die before him. The astrologer was dismissed without a present.

Another was introduced, who, after the usual ceremonies of casting a nativity, declared, that he would outlive all who could have any pretension to the Caliphate. This man was handsomely rewarded.

The meaning of each prophecy was the same; the terms differed. The former astrologer had mentioned death; the latter had softened his speech by another expression. The term death or dying is unpleasant to many;
among the Romans the idea was held in abhorrence, and on their tombstones a word signifying that such a one had lived was substituted for another, that would have proclaimed that he died.

Everything comes to an end which has a beginning.

17.—On the 17th of December, 1154, Henry II. was crowned King of England. One of this prince's biographers says he was "brave, just, anxious to preserve the prosperity of his subjects, and unwilling to oppress them: as a father, affectionate and forgiving; and as a man friendly and generous." A curious circumstance is related as having occurred to the king whilst stopping to view St. David's Cathedral, on his return from Ireland, where he had been to receive the submission of his subjects. Whilst viewing the sacred pile, he was molested by the screaming execrations of an old Welsh woman, who vociferated in her own tongue, "Oh Lech-laver, deliver us! This Lech-laver, at the King's inquiry, was found to be a huge flat stone, then used as a bridge in the churchyard, but probably once an object of Druid worship. It had been, it seems, foretold by Merlin, that on that stone, an English king should die, on his coming back from the conquest of Ireland. Henry, whose mind soared above vulgar superstition, smiled at the hag's scurrility; gazed without emotion at the stone, and with bitter taunts derided the reveries of the British prophet.

27.—The festival of the Holy Innocents, or Childermas Day, was instituted to commemorate the slaughter of the Jewish children by Herod at the Nativity of our Saviour.

WINTER.

*There's not a flower upon the hill,
There's not a leaf upon the tree;
The summer-bird hath left its bough,
Bright child of sunshine, singing
now,
In spicy lands beyond the sea.*

*There's silence in the harvest-field;
And blackness in the mountain-
glen,
And cloud that will not pass away
From the hill-tops for many a day:
And stillness round the homes of men.*

The Garden.

Sow a few peas and beans, as in November. Very few operations can be carried on this month with the exception of trenching and digging in dry weather—operations which should by all means be attended to. The ground should be thoroughly well turned up for exposure to the frost and snow. Plant all sorts of fruit-trees in mild weather. Mulch over the roots of tender trees such as apricot and peach, as they are often so far affected by frost as to be barren in the coming year. Proceed with pruning and nailing wall-trees whenever an opportunity occurs. Examine the fruit that is in the store-room every week, and remove all that is found to be in a state of decay. As to the flower-garden, the directions for last month will be found equally applicable to this. The store plants in the pit must be kept dry, and have full exposure whenever the weather is fair and not frosty; keep them free from dead leaves or damp litter.

SOUNDS HEARD BY NIGHT.

*The day is done and the darkness
Falls from the wings of night.*

LONGFELLOW.

THE great audibility of sounds during the night is a phenomenon of considerable interest and one which had been observed even by the ancients. In crowded cities, or in their vicinity, the effect was generally ascribed to the rest of animated beings, while in localities where such an explanation was inapplicable, it was supposed to arise from a favourable direction of the prevailing wind. Baron Humboldt was particularly struck with this phenomenon when he

THE WINTER ROBIN.

*A suppliant to your window comes,
Who trusts your faith, and fears no guile;
He claims admittance for your crumbs,
And reads his passport in your smile.*

*For cold and cheerless is the day,
And he has sought the hedges round;
No berry hangs upon the spray,
Nor worm, nor ant-egg can be found.*

*Secure his suit will be preferred,
No fears his slender feet deter,
For sacred is the household bird
That wears the scarlet stomacher.*

first heard the rushing of the great cataracts of the Orinoco in the plain which surrounds the mission of the Apures. These sounds he regarded as three times louder during the night than during the day.

Some authors ascribed this fact to the cessation of the humming of insects, the singing of birds, and the action of the wind on the leaves of the trees; but Baron Humboldt justly maintains that this cannot be the cause of it on the Orinoco, where the buzz of insects is much louder in the night than in the day, and where the breeze never rises till after sunset. Hence he was led to ascribe the phenomenon to the perfect transparency and uniform density of the air, which can exist only at night after the heat of the ground has been uniformly diffused through the atmosphere. When the rays of the sun have been beating on the ground during the day, currents of hot air of different temperatures, and consequently of different densities, are constantly ascending from the ground and mixing with the cold air above. The air thus ceases to be a uniform medium, and objects seen through it which are very indistinctly visible have a tremulous motion, as if they were "dancing in the air." The very same effect is perceived when we look at objects through spirits and water that are not perfectly mixed, or when we view distant objects over a red-hot poker or over a flame. In all these cases the light suffers refraction in passing from a medium of one density into a medium of a different density, and the refracted rays are constantly changing their direction, as the different currents rise in succession. Analogous effects are produced when sound passes through a mixed medium. —Sir David Brewster.

MUSICAL NOTES.

“THE government of a country is easy,” says a musician, “compared with the government of a choir.”

The attitude of great composers towards other great composers is usually that of contempt.

One of Paganini’s pretended discoveries was to remove the second and third strings of his violin and simulate a dialogue between the first and fourth.

Luther possessed a fine deep voice, and played both the flute and the lute so well as to attract the notice of passers-by as he journeyed to Worms.

Would to heaven that a race of monstrosities could arise in the world of artists, players with six fingers on each hand: then the day of virtuosodom would be at end.—Schumann.

In the thirteenth century the use of the organ in Divine Service was deemed profane and scandalous by the Greek and Latin clergy, just as in the seventeenth century the instrument was called a squeaking abomination by the Puritans.

Mozart used to prophesy that his youngest child, Wolfgang, would be a genuine Mozart, because when he cried he always did so in the precise key in which his father happened to be playing at the moment.

Pope, after listening to Handel’s exquisite harpsichord playing, declared that it gave him no pleasure, that his ears were of that untoward make and reprobate cast to receive his music with as much indifference as a common ballad.

There is a caricature of Handel representing him at the organ, with a boar’s head and enormous tusks (a hit at his passionate temper). The room in which he plays is strewn with horns, trumpets, and kettle-drums; farther off there is a donkey braying, and a battery of artillery which is fired by the blazing music of the organist.

When the “Messiah” of Handel was first performed in London, on the 23rd of March, 1743, it is related that the audience was exceedingly struck and affected by the music in general, but that when that part of the Hallelujah Chorus began “For the Lord God omnipotent reigneth,” they were so transported that they all, with the King, who was present, started at once to their feet, and remained standing till the chorus ended. The custom of standing during the performance of the Hallelujah Chorus originated from this circumstance.

In singing, a good and distinct articulation is a great charm.

Notes gradually ascending are introduced to describe the rising of the moon in Haydn’s “Creation.”

The man that hath no music in himself . . . Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils.

SHAKESPEARE.

When Dragonetti, the famous double-bass player, appeared in the orchestra he was always accompanied by his dog Carlo.

The best words for music are those which contain the fewest number of thoughts and the greatest number of emotions.—Haweis.

A good example of laughter in music is to be found in Handel’s setting of Milton’s “L’Allegro,” in which is the line “And laughter holding both his sides.”

A weak point in the clarinet is the couac (the French for quack) or “goose,” a sudden horrible noise which it indulges in when the reed is out of order and the wind is not quite under control.

The social position of musicians was at one time very different from what it is now. Mozart dined at the same table as the cooks in the archbishop’s establishment to which he was attached.

“Yes,” said George; “I take up my violin for my own amusement occasionally, but I never play before company.” “Thank you,” said Tom, “thank you, my dear fellow, thank you.”

All who object to street music, and find words but thrown away upon organ-grinders, should make themselves familiar with the provisions of 27 & 28 Vic. c. 55. This statute enacts that any householder, personally, or by his servant, or by any police-constable, may require any street musician or street singer to depart from the neighbourhood of the house of such householder, on account of the illness or on account of the interruption of the ordinary occupations or pursuits of any inmate of such house, or for other reasonable or sufficient cause, and every person who shall sound or play upon any musical instrument or shall sing in any thoroughfare or public place near any such house after being so required to depart is liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings, or to imprisonment up to three days. A police-constable may take the offender into custody without warrant if the person making the charge thinks fit to give him into custody.

LOVE ASLEEP.

*Hush! hush! the God of Love here sleeping lies:
His hands disarmed, and closed his wanton eyes.
The bow, unstrung, awhile forgets to wound,
His us’less shafts lie scattered on the ground.
Sleep on, sweet babe, and smiling promise peace,
For should’st thou wake, we know ’twill quickly cease.*

WOONG AND MARRYING.

Choose a wife rather by your ear than your eye.

HE that takes a wife takes care.—Franklin.

The reason why so few marriages are happy is because young ladies spend their time in making notes, not in making cages.—Swift.

It goes far towards reconciling me to being a woman when I reflect that I am thus in no danger of marrying one.—Lady Wortley Montagu.

A woman who marries a man poorer than herself is rarely willing to be guided by him. She will not adopt his ideas and habits, but will impose her own upon him.—Michlet.

A boating man recently asked a pretty but somewhat strong-minded young lady to "row in the same boat" with him for life. "On one condition," she promptly answered; "and that is—I steer!"

He that hath a handsome wife by other men is thought happy; it is a pleasure to look upon her and be in her company; but the husband is cloyed with her. We are never content with what we have.—Selden.

A good wife is Heaven's last best gift to man—his angel and minister of graces innumerable, his gem of many virtues, his casket of jewels; her voice is sweet music, her smiles his brightest day, her kiss the guardian of his innocence, her arms the pale of his safety, the balm of his health, the balsam of his life; her industry his surest wealth, her economy his safest steward, her lips his faithful counsellors, her bosom the softest pillow of his cares, and her prayers the ablest advocates of Heaven's blessing on his head.—Jeremy Taylor.

A Yorkshireman's wife was dying. She was long ill, and during her sickness was always exclaiming "Eh! I'm boun'to dee! It win't be long afore I dee! I shan't be long here!" and the like. Her husband heard these exclamations day after day, and said nothing. At last he got a little impatient over them, and said one day, as she was exclaiming as usual "Oh, dear! I'm goin' to dee!" "Why, lass, thou'st said that ower and ower again a mony times. Why doan't thou set a time and stick to it?" On another occasion his wife slightly varied the tune to "Eh! the poor bairns! What will become o' t' bairns when I dee? Who will mind t' bairns when their mother is dead?" "Never thee trouble thy head about that," said her husband; "go on wi' thy deecin'. I'll mind t' bairns."—S. Baring-Gould.

Take the daughter of a good mother.—Fuller.

The fate of the child is always the work of his mother.—Napoleon.

In marriage it is all very well to say that "the two are made one"—the question is which one?

A gentleman in Nottingham looking from his window one day, saw a lady pass who seemed very much like his late wife. He made haste after her, and having succeeded in obtaining all necessary information, she was married to him, because of the likeness which she bore to one whom he had tenderly loved.

No trait of character is more valuable in a woman than a sweet temper. Home can never be made happy without it. It is like the flowers that spring up in our pathway, reviving and cheering us. Let a man go home at night wearied and worn by the toils of the day, and how soothing is a word dictated by a good disposition! It is sunshine falling on his heart. He is happy, and the cares of life are forgotten.

A clergyman travelling through the village of Kettle, in Fife, was called into an inn to officiate at a marriage instead of the parish minister, who, from some accident, was unable to attend, and had caused the company to wait for a considerable time. While the reverend gentleman was pronouncing the admonition, and just as he had told the bridegroom to love and honour his wife, the said bridegroom interjected the words "and obey," which he thought had been omitted from oversight, though that is part of the rule laid down solely to the wife. The minister, surprised to find a husband willing to be henpecked by anticipation, did not take advantage of the proposed amendment; on which the bridegroom again reminded him of the omission—"Ay, and obey, sir—love, honour, and obey, ye ken!" and he seemed seriously discomposed at finding that his hint was not taken. Some years after the same clergyman was riding through this village of the culinary name, when the same man came out and stopped him, addressing him in the following remarkable words:—"D'ye mind, sir, yon day when ye married me, and when I wad insist upon vowing to obey my wife! Weel, ye may now see that I was in the richt. Whether ye wad or no, I hae obeyed my wife; and behold, I am now the only man that has a two-storey house in the hale toun!"

HAPPINESS.

*What is there in the vale of life
Half so delightful as a wife,
When friendship, love, and peace combine
To stamp the marriage-bond divine?*

IN GOOD AND BAD HEALTH.

Man wants but little here below.—GOLDSMITH.

THE employment of an apothecary, says Voltaire, is to pour drugs, of which he knows little, into a body of which he knows less.

Disease is a blessing, for it is Nature's effort to preserve the body—her method of throwing poisons out of the system, and whatever of discomfort there is in it we are called to pay rational attention, and to co-operate with Nature in promoting the process of cure.

A bad painter, notorious for his want of skill in his vocation, left the town where he resided and went to dwell at another some distance off, at which place he commenced physician. Being asked by a person who had known him formerly the reason of his changing professions, he answered, "If I now commit faults the earth covers them."

"Your unchristian virulence against me," said a Huguenot, who had been persecuted for preaching, "shall cost hundreds of people their lives." This menace brought the author into trouble: he was cited to a court of justice, and was charged with harbouring the most bloody designs against his fellow-subjects. "I am innocent," said he, "of all you lay to my account. My only meaning was that I intended (since I could not act as a minister) to practise as a physician."

Simple diet is best, for many dishes bring many diseases.—Pliny.

The illness of the body usually brings out a latent power and philosophy of the soul, which health never knows; and God has mercifully ordained it as the customary lot of Nature, that in proportion as we decline into the grave, the sloping path is made easy and smooth to our feet; and every day, as the films of clay are removed from our eyes, Death loses the false aspect of the spectre, and we fall at last into its arms as a wearied child upon the bosom of its mother.—Lord Lytton.

Theodoric, Archbishop of Cologne, was illustrious in his time for his talents, erudition, and morals. One day the Emperor Sigismund asked of him instructions to obtain happiness. "We cannot, sire, expect it in this world." "Which then is the way to happiness hereafter?" "You must act virtuously." "What do you mean by that expression?" "I mean," says Theodoric, "that you should always pursue that plan of conduct which you promise to do whilst you are labouring under a fit of the gravel, gout, or stone."

A fool or a physician at forty is an adage containing more truth than is commonly believed. He who has not by that time learned to observe the causes of self-disorder shows little signs of wisdom.

Each death involves an average of twenty-eight days of sickness; that is, for every person dying twenty-eight persons are sick one day.

A certain quack used always to carry with him a large box full of medicines; and whenever he was consulted by a patient put his hand into the box and drew out the first that came, exclaiming at the same time, "May heaven be pleased to send the right one!"

Physicians are often said to have very little religion. It was remarked, as a singular fact, that during the massacre of

St. Bartholomew, although all the Calvinists who were attached to their religion, and known to be so, were marked out as victims, there was not a physician on the list, and, in point of fact, not a physician perished in that dreadful butchery.

CHEERFULNESS.

*To die is due by all; no mortal knows
Whether to-morrow's dawn his life may close.
Knowing this well, O man, let cheering wine,
That sweet forgetfulness of death, be thine.
Give way to love too: live from day to day,
And yield to fate o'er all things else the sway.*

PALLADAS.

The best physicians are Dr. Diet, Dr. Quiet, and Mr. Merryman.

Nature is fighting with disease. A blind man, armed with a club—that is the physician—comes to settle the difference. He first tries to make peace; when he cannot accomplish this he lifts his club and strikes at random. If he strikes the disease he kills the disease, if he strikes Nature he kills the patient.

A cheery, hopeful doctor will do his patients far more good than mere medicine. All clear-sighted physicians now agree that where chronic or mortal maladies are in question little benefit can be derived from the orthodox method of drugging, and this is why our best doctors lay such stress on "hygiene," diet, climate, and last, but not least, an untroubled mind.

An able medical writer thus frankly exposes his opinion of his own craft and of medicine-taking generally:—"I declare," says Dr. James Johnson, "my conscientious opinion, founded on long observation and reflection, that if there was not a single physician, surgeon, apothecary, man-midwife, chemist, druggist, or drug, on the face of the earth "there would be less sickness and less mortality than now obtains."

*"My dart," cried Death, "I cannot find,
So now I'm quite at sea."*

Quoth Dr. Bolus, "Never mind; Here, take this recipe."

WOODS AND FORESTS.

Nature never did betray the heart that loved her.—WORDSWORTH.

WOODS are of very different strength. Taking the strength of the oak as 1,000, that of the poplar will be 583; pine, 565; fir, 585; birch, 672; sycamore, 744; and ash, 983.

An American, fresh from magnificent woods and rough clearings, was one day visiting the owner of a beautiful seat in Brooklyn; and, walking with him through a little grove, out of which all the underbrush had been cleared, paths had been nicely cut and gravelled, and the rocks covered with woodbine, suddenly stopped, and, admiring the beauty of the scene, lifted up his hands and exclaimed: "This I like! This is Nature—with her hair combed!"

Of the forest trees the sycamore, the ash, the lime, and the chestnut, first lose their foliage; the elm retains its verdure a little while longer; the beech and the oak are the last to yield to the driving shower and the rude wind; and when these display their naked branches the beauty of the woodlands is completely passed, and they remain in their barrenness till the spring again calls forth the buds into life.

The elm was considered by the ancients of Eastern nations as a funeral tree as well as the cypress. It is celebrated in the "Iliad" for having formed a hasty bridge by which Achilles escaped the Xanthus, when that river, by its overflowing, placed him in danger of being carried away. It has been suggested that the Romans probably introduced it into Britain.

The willow in Cambridgeshire is called the Cambridge oak. Old Fuller calls it "a sad tree, whereof such who have lost their love make their mourning garlands; and we know what exiles hung up their harps upon such doleful supporters. The twigs hereof are physick to drive out the folly of children. This tree delighteth in moist places, and is triumphant in the Isle of Ely, where the roots strengthen their banks, and top affords fuel for their fire. It groweth incredibly fast, it being a by-word in this county that the profit by willows will buy the owner a horse before that by other trees will pay for his saddle. Let me add that if green ashe may burne before a queen, withered willows may be allowed to burne before a lady." The old saying, "She is in her willows" is here illustrated; it implies mourning for a lost mate.

The vine ceases to grow at about 2,300 feet above the level of the sea, Indian corn at 2,800 feet, oak at 3,350 feet, walnut at 3,600 feet, ash at 4,800 feet, yellow pine at 6,200 feet, and fir at 6,700 feet.

Dwarf trees are amongst the curiosities of Japan. By examining closely the specimens in Japanese gardens one may see traces of the dwarfing process. The leading shoots have been clipped or bent downward; the lateral branches turned in and tied back; lusty limbs twisted and wrenched into quaint postures; marks of the torturing pins, and bands, and cuts are still observable; it is a crippled dwarf of a tree, made quaint and picturesque by years of struggle.

Among conifers may be noted young plants of that Japanese species seen under the wings of Japanese buildings—quaint pigmies not three feet high, yet over seventy years old. They are gnarled and twisted as if they had fought the winds, and caught their picturesqueness of form—as old oaks catch theirs—by battling with

HOW LONG DO TREES LIVE? *

The following table shows the maximum age attained by different trees:—

Years.		Years.
Palm	250	Chestnut ..	860

tempests and wintry storms upon the hills. And yet, is there a compensating beauty in them? Not, surely, as we reckon the beauty of plant growth. But consider that the Japanese, in their horticultural system, have offices for such dwarf trees. With them no homestead is complete without its garden; a few square rods may be all at command, but this area must have its garden treatment, and the gardens are modelled after Nature. "San-sui" (mountain and water) is the term which in the Japanese describes the cultivator's work. The aim is—within, however, a limited area—to present a complete landscape, with rock, valley, plain, water, and mountain. Under such miniature presentment, trees and plants must be dwarfed to bear proper relations to the dwarfed valleys and rocks. To such an extent is this copying of Nature in miniature carried, that a rocky landscape, with its heights, and level spaces, and trees, is wrought out, with close attention to proportions, within the limits of a great bronze basin. I doubt if cultivators of the West will emulate them in their mimicry of Nature, but they may well emulate the painstaking skill which makes such small successes possible, and the assiduous care and the close study of plant life which are enforced by such arts.

The least boy carries the biggest fiddle.

THE LION'S DEN.

The lion is not so fierce as painted.—FULLER.

UNDER the reign of Augustus, king of Poland and elector of Saxony, a lion was kept in the menagerie at Dresden, between whom and his attendant such a good understanding subsisted that the latter used not to lay the food which he brought to him before the grate, but carried it into his cage. Generally the man wore a green jacket, and a considerable time had elapsed, during which the lion had always appeared very friendly and grateful whenever he received a visit from him. Once the keeper, having been to church to receive the sacrament, had put on a black coat, as is usual in that country upon such occasions, and he still wore it when he gave the lion his dinner. The unusual appearance of the black coat excited the lion's rage; he leaped at his keeper, and struck his claws into his shoulder. The man spoke to him gently, when the well-known tone of his voice brought the lion in some degree to recollection. Doubt appeared expressed in his terrific features; however, he did not quit his hold. An alarm was raised; the wife and children ran to the place with shrieks of terror. Soon some grenadiers of the guard arrived, and offered to shoot the animal, as there seemed, in this critical moment, to be no other means of extricating the man from him. But the keeper, who was attached to the lion, begged them not to do it, as he hoped he should be able to extricate himself at a less expense. For nearly a quarter of an hour he capitulated with his enraged friend, who still would not let go his hold, but shook his mane, lashed his sides with his tail, and rolled his fiery eyes. At length the man felt himself unable to sustain the weight of the lion, and yet any serious effort to extricate himself would have been at the immediate hazard of his life. He, therefore, desired the grenadiers to fire, which they did through the grate, and killed the lion on the spot; but in the same moment, perhaps only by a convulsive dying grasp, he squeezed the keeper between his powerful claws with such force that he broke his arms, ribs, and spine; and, to the horror of the crowd of onlookers, they both fell down dead together in the bottom of the cage.

In the beginning of the last century there was in the menagerie at Cassel a lion that showed an astonishing degree of tameness towards the woman that had the care of him. This went so far that the woman, in order to amuse the company that came to see the animal, would often rashly place not only her hand but even her head between his tremendous jaws. She had frequently performed this experiment, without suffering any injury; but having once introduced her head into the lion's mouth the animal made a sudden snap, and killed her on the spot. Undoubtedly this catastrophe was unintentional on the part of the lion; for, probably, at the fatal moment the hair of the woman's head irritated the lion's throat, and compelled him to sneeze or cough; at least, this supposition seems to be confirmed by what followed: for as soon as the lion perceived that he had killed his attendant the good-tempered, grateful animal exhibited signs of the deepest melancholy, laid himself down by the side of the dead body, which he would not suffer to be taken from him, refused to take any food, and in a few days pined himself to death.

When a lion seizes or strikes its victim, by some merciful and most marvellous provision, the mode of whose working is at present unknown, the sense of pain is driven out of the victim. The first person who seems to have noticed this was Livingstone, the well-known traveller, who learned the lesson by practical experience. After describing an attack upon a lion, he proceeds: "Starting and looking half round, I saw the lion just in the act of springing on me. I was upon a little height; he caught my shoulder as he sprang, and we both came to the ground below together. Growling horribly close to my ear he shook me as a terrier does a rat. The shock produced a stupor similar to that which seems to be felt by a mouse after the first shake of a cat. It causes a sort of dreaminess in which there was no sense of pain or feeling of terror, though I was quite conscious of all that was happening. It was like what patients partially under chloroform describe, who see all the operation but feel not the knife."

AMIALE KINGS.

An honest man's the noblest work of God.—POPE.

IT is related of one of the French kings that on being told the people made free with his character in their songs, he answered, "It would be very hard if they were not allowed to sing for their money."

Alphonso, King of Naples and Sicily, so celebrated in history for his clemency, was once asked why he was so favourable to all men, even to those most notoriously wicked? "Because," answered he, "good men are won by justice, the bad by clemency." When some of his Ministers complained to him on another occasion of his lenity, which they were pleased to say was more than became a prince, "What, then," exclaimed he, "would you have lions and tigers to reign over us? Know you not that cruelty is the attribute of wild beasts — clemency that of man?"

One day, at Potsdam, Frederick the Great heard from his cabinet a considerable tumult in the street; he called an officer, and told him to go and ascertain the cause. The officer went, and came back to tell his majesty that a very scurrilous placard against his majesty was fixed on the wall, but that it was placed so high that a great crowd pressed forward, and were pushing each other to read it. "But the guards," he added, "will soon come and disperse them." "Do nothing of the kind," replied the king; "fix the placard lower down, that they may read it at their ease."

The last words of Charles V. of France, surnamed "The Wise," are memorable for the noble moral for kings which they contain—and, indeed, they are applicable to all, as every man has the power to do good or evil. "I have aimed at justice," said he to those around him; "but what king can be certain that he has always followed it? Perhaps I have done much evil of which I am ignorant. Frenchmen, who now hear me, I address myself to the Supreme Being and to you. I find that kings are happy but in this—that they have the power of doing good." This distinguished monarch reigned in France from 1365 till 1380. He was the son of John "the Good," who died in captivity in England.

The Emperor Sigismund was reproached for rewarding instead of destroying his enemies, as by that means he gave them an opportunity to injure him. "What," said the noble-minded monarch, "do not I destroy my enemies when I make them my friends?"

Louis XIV. was told that Lord Stair was one of the best bred men in Europe. "I shall soon put that to the test," said the king; and, asking Lord Stair to take an airing with him, as soon as the door of the coach was opened, he bade him pass, and go in. The other bowed and obeyed. The king said, "The world's in the right in the character it gives; another person would have troubled me with ceremony."

When his Minister presented a catalogue of his attendants to Alfonso, King of Castile, to mark the names of such as he deemed superfluous and burdensome to the prince, reserving some who might be useful and necessary, the king, on examining the list, made the following generous and witty answer: "Some of them I must retain, because I cannot do without them; and the rest I must keep, because they cannot do without me."

George III., in his walks about his farms, was often alone, and many pleasant little incidents occurred on meeting with rustics, to whom he was sometimes unknown. One day he had to pass through a narrow hedge-gate, on which sat a young clown, who showed no readiness in moving. "Who are you, boy?" said the King. "I be a pig-boy," answered he. "Where do you come from? Who do you work for here?" "I be from the low country; out of work at present." "Don't they want lads here?" said the King. "I don't know," rejoined the boy; "all belongs hereabouts to Georgy." "Pray," said his majesty, "who is Georgy?" "He be the king, and lives at the Castle, but he does no good for me." His Majesty immediately gave orders at his farm hard by to have the boy employed; and when he saw him he told him to be a steady lad, and "Georgy" might do some good for him.

UNREST.

*All day upon the garden bright
The sun shines strong,
But in my heart there is no light,
Nor any song.*

Adown the street,
But I am weary of the cry,
And drift of feet.*

Nor stint to give;
For if my soul have no sweet song
It cannot live.* AMERICAN AUTHOR.

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT AND THEIR CONSTITUENCIES.

THE General Election of 1886 began on the 1st of July and ended on the 27th. It took place under the Reform Acts of 1832 and 1867, which dealt with representation and distribution of seats, giving to householders and lodgers in counties the same franchises which were conferred upon the corresponding classes in boroughs by the Reform Act of 1832, and providing for a new division of the United Kingdom into county and borough constituencies.

By the legislation of 1832-35 the number of members of the House of Commons was increased from 652 to 670, and of the 18 new members thus created 6 were given to England and 12 to Scotland. In the following table we give a summary of the constitution of the House of Commons:—

In the following pages we have first a complete list in alphabetical order of the constituencies of the three Kingdoms with the respective members elected to Parliament at the last General Election and subsequent Bye-Elections; showing also the political party to which each member belongs, the number of votes polled in his favour, and, wherever a contest occurred, the majority by which his return was secured. This is followed by an alphabetical list of members, succeeded in each case by the name of the place represented.

Thousands of Testimonials from all Parts of the World.

83 Great Georges Street, Leeds, May 13, 1889.

"I am a missionary, and go about a great deal. Some time ago a man asked me to become surety for him to a chemist, at Darlington, for some of your 'Clarke's Blood Mixture.' He obtained what he wanted, and it completely cured him. He had blotches on his skin, was generally debilitated, and could not attend to his work. I saw him every day during the time he went through the course of your Mixture, and I never saw such a change in a man in my life. He was as clear and as light as a feather, so to speak, in three weeks. I think I ought to let you know that 'Clarke's Blood Mixture,' and nothing else, cured him. You can make what use you like of this. HENRY WELFARE."

11 Wood Street, Kidderminster, April 13, 1889.

"I write to tell you of the great benefit my boy, aged 17, has received from the use of your Blood Mixture. Nine months ago he was taken with severe pains all over the body, and in a few weeks there came dreadful eruptions all over the body, about the size of a shirt button, and of course he could not go to work in such a state. I took him to the Infirmary, and the doctor said his blood was in a fearful state, and he was in there nearly three months, and they could not do him a bit of good. And one day reading in the 'Kidderminster Sun' of your Blood Mixture, I got him out and got a small bottle to try it. After he had used one bottle he seemed so much better I got him another. He has now used five small bottles, and the eruptions are all gone, and everybody is astonished at the wonderful cure. EMMA TOMLINSON."

4 Pleasant Place, Bond Street, Vauxhall, London, S.W., March 16, 1889.

"I have suffered from a virulent form of Eczema for the past fourteen months, and have been attended by different doctors during the whole of that time without any good result. I also attended a hospital for a time, but received very little benefit. About eight weeks ago, however, I was persuaded to try Clarke's Blood Mixture, the effect of which was truly marvellous. The unsightly and painful spots commenced at once to disappear. I cannot speak too highly of this medicine and its blood-cleansing properties. You may make what use you like of this letter, and I shall be happy to answer any questions on the subject at any time. FRANCIS HEMELL."

FRANCIS HEMELL."

"Messrs The Midland Counties Drug Company, Lincoln."

Sold in Bottles 2s 9d each, and in cases containing six times the quantity, 11s—sufficient to effect a permanent cure in the great majority of long-standing cases.
